Ship Sailing Interests Judy

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Judith Archer is a country school teacher, 22, and good looking. She wants to be a college professor, while her mother would like her to go in the movies. But Judy lived a double life. She becomes interested in the story of a jewel robbery in London.

CHAPTER 3

"Well, Miss Archer. Well, well! Ready to call it a day?"

Judy raised her head slowly. Light played upon the lenses of her spectacles and from where he stood her expression was the blank one of uncurtained windows.

"No," she said. And went back to the papers on her desk.

She did not see angry red creep up his pointed face. She paid no attention to his step as he moved forward, stood there watching her. He, the principal, and she a lower grade teacher! He made a furious movement—caught the light glinting on her spectacles again—backed off.

"Well, I didn't know but what you'd take a walk. Stroll out to North Mountain, Miss Archer?"

"No!"

"Well, I didn't know. G-good day."

Peacock!

Judy Is Angry

She did not answer. He closed the door softly and tiptoed away down the corridor. And then she raised her head and sent a little grimance after him. "Peacock!" she hissed.

A half-hearted hiss, however.

The sort of hiss a cat gives at sight of a dog on the other side of a window pane, and it was meant less for little Roy Varman than for his sex.

Judy put down the paper now and thought it over. Undoubtedly there were in the world—the real world, not the world of the other Judy—men almost as fine and noble and lovable as her father had been. Men who considered women intelligent and sometimes honest. She admitted this. As yet she had met only the other kind — the tricky, lord-of-creation kind—and, of course, it was because of what Fate had done to her.

Peggy Archer left a widow with that rambling old Archer homestead in its rambling old stretch of lawn and just about enough to live on until Judy could begin to earn — this when she was 15. Peggy couldn't manage. She would buy flowers instead of good steak for the table and cunning little party dresses for Judy when she hadn't shoes.

About Bills

Judy Cuts Them

So at 15 Judy had taken over the management of Peggy's income. And part of the management of the house. And of Peggy herself, for the matter of that!

Evenings after high school she would sit out the check book and the monthly crop of bills. She would reason with Peggy, would then give up in despair before Peggy's tears. She had to deal with tradesmen, workmen, everybody. And they laughed at the idea of taking orders from a frantic child. It was then Judy learned to distrust all men and despise most of them.

"I'll pay no such price as that, Pat Muldoon. Don't think because I'm a woman I'm a fool."

"Woman, is it! Ah, now, Miss Judy, I'll not have ye talkin' so and me makin' the bill that reasonable."

"Don't you fib to me! I know the price of things and I know

TERCENTENARY FUND NEEDS BIG BOOST

What Mrs. Vox Pop Thinks of Lights

Helps "Lifer"

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON of Brookline who is leading the fight to obtain a parole for Antonio Scalli of North Adams, who has already served 20 years of life term in State prison for murder. Mrs. Anderson says Scalli is an artist of great talent.

FIGHT TO FREE LIFER SCALLI

Antonio Scalli, who has spent 20 years in State prison for killing a man in North Adams, today dreams of his release on parole as he awaits the return to Boston of Mrs. Larz Anderson, one of America's wealthiest women, to testify before the State advisory board of pardons in his behalf.

Leading the fight to obtain Scalli's release, Mrs. Anderson has enlisted the aid of the Italian Ambassador, Consul General Pio Margotti of Boston and others. The hearing yesterday was continued to enable Mrs. Anderson to appear before the board.

Scalli, who painted a portrait of Mrs. Anderson in appreciation of the hours she had spent sharing with him her own rare artistic ability and giving him "pointers," is an artist of great talent, Mrs. Anderson says.

Scalli was given a life term for the murder of Giovanni Cannixo, whom he shot and killed in a $49 holdup.

New Englanders to Sail on Trip Abroad

Boston and New England passengers sailing at midnight Saturday for Europe on the Hamburg-American Line motorship St. Louis include the following:

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Lee of Brookline, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Railsback of Newtonville, Miss M. DeC. Ward of Boston, Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Partridge of Providence, Prof. Carl W. Miller of Brown University, his wife and Miss Virginia and Master Carle. ton Miller; Thomas W. Surette, director of the Concord summer school of music, and Mrs. Surette; Robert Delaney, Perry Walton, the Rev. and Mrs. Roberts Seilhammer of Pawtucket, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Turner of Boston, Miss E. S. Rohland of Providence, David Crowe, Henry V. Pelton, John H. Boles of Brookline and Leo Wasserman of Boston.

Cong. Rogers Flies to Legion Meeting

En route to the American Legion convention at Williamstown, Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers of Lowell flew from Boston airport to North Adams today. She was piloted by Lieut. Joseph A. Wilson, army flier.

SOME DO NOT LIKE NEW SYSTEM

Many Other Women Say the Plan Will Make Walking Safer, but Slower

It's high time the "man in the street"—or, let us say, the woman on the sidewalk—had a say about the new traffic lights.

Officials have talked, editors have written, but pedestrians Americanus today crash into print for the first time and, while good-natured about it for the most part, they have some adverse criticism, too. They say:

MRS. C. HOWARD, housewife, Winthrop.—I learned to appreciate a similar traffic system in New York. I have come to believe it's better to go slow and sure than to take the risks that jaywalkers took under the old system.

MRS. MARY MURPHY, housewife, I. st., South Boston.—I guess it is all right when people understand it. I don't try to hurry now, for I can't. It ought to make the streets safer.

MISS MARGARET CONLEY, High Rock st., Needham.—I note that I will have to watch the sidewalk lights closely now when I go down town shopping, but perhaps that is a good thing for me. It is hard to remember that at every corner, though.

MISS ANNE RICHARDSON, musician, Gainsborough st., Back Bay: The new system is a nuisance. I have lost valuable time waiting for an traffic to stop before going on the red and yellow light, and that seems unnecessary. The cars crossing parallel with me would not hinder my crossing.

MRS. GEORGE M. BROWN, housewife, Harriet st., Allston: "I fail to see where traffic is speeded up. It seems to me that this system delays pedestrians and motorists, too.

MISS MARGARET CRONIN, department store clerk: I must confess it makes me wild not to be able to dash across the street and get to work on time if my train is a little late. There seems to be such big crowds on the corners that no one could possibly make up a lost minute by hurrying now.

WOMAN SHOPPER, who refused to give her name: Don't ask me silly questions. I'm delayed enough now by these lights.

What Traffic Colors Mean

THIS EXPLANATION of the new automatic signals installed in the downtown area is presented to eliminate the confusion which has so far delayed the handling of traffic. Pedestrians, particularly, are not acquainted with the meaning of the combination lights, police report. Study them now and don't be a jaywalker.

PEDESTRIANS ARE GIVEN 30 seconds to cross streets by the new automatic traffic signals. The yellow light flashes with the red for that interval.

500-MILE BIKE TRIP 'ENOUGH'

Victor Scrocca, 20, of Alpine st., Somerville, and Adolph Kirk of Williams st., Brookline, who set out on bicycles Saturday morning for Buffalo, N. Y., arrived there—broke.

Word that the 500-mile trip had been accomplished came to Kirk's home today in a telegram that read:

"Arrived o. k. but broke. Please wire some money at once."

In a telephone conversation Adolph told his brother, Harold Kirk, that the two had had enough bicycle riding for this summer, had crated their machines to be sent home as freight and would start themselves as soon as they got money for train fare.

'Loud Speaker' May Curb Jaywalkers

The "problem of the pedestrian," created by the new traffic signal system, today occupied the major attention of Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry and in addition to the warning bell suggestion offered by the Boston American he had under consideration an idea for an automatic loud speaker on the busiest corners.

George A. Wilson, Devonshire business man, sponsored the loud speaker idea as a solution to the task of educating the walking public to cross intersections only when the combination red and yellow traffic signal shows.

The suggested automatic loud speaker would announce every other second:

Not only would it be a boon to traffic officers now growing hoarse shouting the same phrase, but its announcement, in louder tones than the unmagnified human voice, could be expected to arrest the attention of jay-walkers.

BLAME PEDESTRIANS

Difficulties in the signal system are wholly from the pedestrian angle, Wilson declared, and women he found to be principal violators of the light rules.

"Boston's new traffic system is the greatest advancement that the city has made in many years," Wilson said.

"There is just one difficulty which must be straightened out if the traffic lights are to be a complete success.

"That is the pedestrian problem that at present faces the traffic policemen. I stood at the corner of Washington and Summer streets for an hour today and I was surprised at the apparent indifference of the people, especially women, to the new system.

"From what I observed the women either don't understand the traffic lights or they don't want to. It is possible that the women don't bother to read the newspapers so that they can know and understand about changes in the traffic system.

APPEAR INSULTED

"And how insulted they appear to be if the policemen ordered them back to the sidewalk when the light changed against them. They all seemed in a hurry and I noticed that many after crossing the street stood for ten minutes to see what the lights were all about.

With the dismantling of the towers, the movement of traffic is expected to be speeded up from 30 to 50 per cent.

Decision to remove the towers was taken at a special meeting of the traffic commission, attended by Commissioner Joseph A. Conry, Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, Joseph A. Rourke and William P. Long. After the session Chief Engineer John F. Hurley notified the Edison Electric and Illuminating Company to disconnect wires and remove the meters.

$100 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston American offers the opportunity. Every week $100 in prizes will be given for news tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

There will be $25 given weekly for the best, first exclusive news tip received, $15 for the next best, $10 for the next best and $3 prizes for each of the 25 next most valuable tips. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

RESPONSE OF PUBLIC TO APPEAL IS SMALL

$300,000 Needed, but Today Total of Only $43,000 Has Been Pledged

With a goal of $300,000, the cash fund to date has reached a total of only $43,000.

Public response to the appeal from the city for help has been slow, and in many cases the donations have been small, despite the fact that of the work of collection has been turned over to solicitors working on a 15 per cent commission basis.

Of the $43,000 in hand $22,000 represents the personal efforts of former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, chairman of the Boston Tercentenary Committee, who is giving considerable of his own time and money to awakening public spirit and civic pride.

TOO MANY APPEALS.

The remaining $21,000 has been collected by some 15 or 20 solicitors working on commission out of an office in the Chamber of Commerce building.

One reason given for the slow public response to the appeal for the fund is the number of other appeals for money being made in connection with the Tercentenary. E. C. Parker, in charge of the fund's headquarters, says:

The announcement made a week ago that a third of the fund, or $100,000, had been subscribed was in error, Parker said today. The meaning meant to be conveyed was that the fund was "approaching" the $100,000 mark.

Fitzgerald has pledges from a number of organizations and individuals for good-size contributions, but many fail to appreciate that the tercentenary citizens' fund is the official agency through which the city hopes to defray the expenses of the public observance.

MUST HAVE MORE MONEY

Only after more money is made available by this fund, by city appropriation and from the total on hand in the public celebrations department will be spent for the Tercentenary, Mayor Curley has declared. In other words, no risk of ending up with a deficit will be run, and if an observance worthy of the occasion is to result a much greater public response must be forthcoming.

The paid solicitors of the Tercentenary citizens' fund have signed credentials from George S. Mumford of the Atlantic National Bank, who is the fund treasurer, and are bonded.

United Fruit Company, $2500; Jordan Marsh Company, William Filene's Sons Company and National Shawmut Bank, each $2000; Atlantic National Bank, $1500; William Endicott, Nellie F. Carter, Merchants' National Bank, William M. Butler, Lee, Higginson & Co., Kidder, Peabody & Co., Hayden, Stone & Co., each $1000; Ernest B. Dane, Gove & Co., Elmer Wadsworth, State Street Trust Company, the North New England Company, Brewster & Weeks, each $500; Mrs. Morton Prince, Walton Lunch Company, each $400; R. H. Stearns Company, $300; Cities Service Trading Company, $300; Whiting Milk Company, Second National Bank, Granite Trust Company, Petroleum Heat and Power Company, Old Colony Trust Company, each $250; Oliver Ditson Company, John Hancock, George F. Gardner, J. L. Hamlin Company, Paine Furniture Company, E. T. Slattery Company, each $200.

Wild & Stevens, $150; J. S. Russell, Leonard Healy Trust, Jeremiah Williams & Co., Theodore T. Whitney Jr., Herbert M. Sears, W. L. Harrell, Boston Consolidated Gas Company, N. A. Johnson Company, Frederick A. Farrar, Reason Thaw Company, Samson Cordage Works, Walton L. Crocker, Webster & Atlas Bank, Exchange Trust Company, London Harness Company, Henry A. Wyman, Alvah F. Sands, Jersey Manufacturing Company, S. D. Warren Company, Rand & W. Snyder, Stetson Shoe Company, W. F. Schrafft & Sons Corporation, Rhodes Brothers Company, Estes S. Draper, Rogers Peet Company, John Hays Hammond, Gordon Abbott, F. A. Foster & Co., each $100.

Bride of Alleged Hotel Thief Held

Judge Michael J. Murray held her for the grand jury with bail reduced from $10,000 to $1000. Her husband was held for the grand jury last Tuesday.

MAYOR ORDERS PORT BOARD TO PROBE ARMY BASE MANAGEMENT

ACTION MAY TERMINATE LEASE

Declares Present Conduct of Place May Work Injury to Boston Shipping Interests

Mayor Curley today directed the Boston Board of Port Authority to make an immediate investigation of alleged mismanagement of the Army Base terminal to the detriment of the port of Boston.

"The present conduct of the Army Base is such as to work great injury to shipping interests of Boston," the mayor said in a letter to Louis F. Kirstein, chairman of the port board.

"The importance of providing the best possible facilities at a minimum cost justifies immediate action by your board, which I trust it will take."

In reply the mayor was told that a prompt and thorough probe would be made.

John T. Scully of the Boston industrial and publicity bureau recommended to the mayor that some investigation should be made, because of complaints received by the bureau.

The Bay State Shipping Company, operated by a group which includes Timothy W. Murphy, a city assessor, had the property under a conditional lease from the U. S. Shipping Board.

The lease may be terminated on six months' notice without cause or may be terminated at once if sufficient cause is deemed to exist.

According to Scully there is much dissension and an investigation should settle whether the city should recommend to the Shipping Board that the lease be ended.

"Old Sol" Caused Plenty of Discomfort Before Being Put to Rout by Severe Storm

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, here we show you authentic photograph of snow which was found in Boston yesterday afternoon, when the thermometer was registering about 84 and when humidity ran high. Enjoying the snow bed is Marie Crowley. She found the snow in rear of an ice house at 1545 Columbus ave. At same time at Revere Beach the group on the right was having an interesting time rolling this big barrel about the surf. Then came the great downpour and relief. (Staff photos.)

SAYS SOVIET IS DUMPING COAL IN BOSTON

Underhill Warns of Peril and Seeks Deportation of Amtorg Head

"Unless the people of America wake up, the next generation may have a story of blood and starvation to read that will rival many of the chapters of the French Revolution."

Congressman Charles L. Underhill of Somerville made this prediction today in connection with a telegram he dispatched to Acting Secretary of Labor Whits at Washington, asking if there is not some way of deporting Peter A. Bogdanov, president of the Amtorg Russian trading company.

"I wonder if the people of Boston realize that their city is being used as a dumping ground for Soviet coal, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used by the Soviet government for the development of communism and the system by which the Soviet government of Russia intends to overthrow the government of the United States," Underhill's statement continued.

He revealed that more than 50,000 tons of coal, "mined by forced and convict labor," have been laid down in the port of Boston during the past 30 weeks.

"This coal is imported into this country by the Amtorg Trading Corporation, of which the president is Peter A. Bogdanov," he said. "This offcestory of this alien, enjoying the hospitality of this country, is most astounding and is a glaring example of what we may expect unless drastic action is taken at once."

BEEF PRICES TAKE DROP

Beef prices took a drop at Faneuil Hall Market today and it is expected that large sales will result, due to the cut. Dealers at the market are unable to estimate how long the decrease in prices will last.

The price cut is biggest in the cheaper cuts of beef and this is expected to be beneficial especially for those whose means are limited.

The very best fancy young steer beef, selling at 38 and 40 cents, will now retail at 30 cents a pound. Fresh ground hamburg drops from 35 to 25 cents a pound. The very best rib roasts, selling at from 30 to 40 cents, will now retail at 25 cents a pound.

Fish are plentiful, especially mackerel, which sells for only 10 cents a pound. Lobster is still high, the price remaining at 60 cents a pound. Clams are scarce, but the prices remain the same.

The market is overloaded with beans of all kinds except limas. Jobbers estimate these would bring 16 wholesale if they could get any of them. Other varieties are selling at 25 to 75 cents a bushel wholesale.

Other vegetables remain about the same. There is plenty of corn in the market and it is retailing at 75 cents a dozen.

Dog Attacks Boy

Conrad Erickson of Bellevue st., Waltham, was attacked and bitten on the leg by a dog while he was at play with other children on the Bicycle Park playground in Waltham.

150 Vacationists at New Ocean House

The sixth annual summer reunion of the Massachusetts St. Petersburg Society will be held tomorrow at the New Ocean House, Swampscott. About 150 guests who winter at the Florida city and whose homes are in Massachusetts will gather for a dinner at noon, followed by an afternoon program.

Miss Elizabeth Herlihy, secretary of the city of Boston planning board, will be the principal speaker. Miss Julia A. Pickett, secretary, is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Dr. J. W. Horne, president, will preside.

Eight in Dedham Take Chief Exam

Eight Dedham police took the examination today for the position of chief, made vacant by the death of Chief Warren C. Totty. Among the aspirants are Sergt. Harry Wragg; Patrolmen Albert Rafferty, John Cahill, John Keegan, Robert Campbell, John McCarthy, Charles McAuliffe and Thomas Sullivan.

Dr. Holt Is Named to State Position

Appointment of Dr. Karl K. Holt as director of the state division for the examination of prisoners was announced today by Dr. George H. Kline, commissioner of the Department of Mental Diseases. Dr. Holt succeeds Dr. Winfred Overholser, who recently was made assistant commissioner of mental diseases.

BUSY BEES NOW READ RED 'GO'

The jay-walking portion of Boston's public can believe it or not, but bees obey traffic lights.

The bee culture laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture is teaching bees new tricks in experiments designed to increase the nation's honey supply; and one of the tricks is to direct the bee swarm to a food supply by means of signal lights.

W. J. Nolan of the laboratory claims that the bees are so intelligent they will proceed to a food supply marked out for them with a red lamp, distaining others not so marked.

Behind the bee traffic light idea is the limiting of the bee food to such courses as will increase the quantity of the honey product and the flavor.

The bee expects know from analysis of honey whether the bees that produced it suffered from stomach-ache, housemaid's knee or any other bee ailment. Then follows a diet for the bees and a careful watch of the new honey.

Red lights are "Go" signals for the traffic bees as they are for the jay-walkers and thus the diet is regulated.

ADAMS BACK ON FORESTRY JOB

Chester A. Adams, who was recently discharged from the Waltham forestry department after charges of misappropriation of gasoline were lodged against him, returned to work yesterday when the civil service commission announced that it had intended merely to remove him from the position of foreman.

Indicating that Adams' discharge was due to a misunderstanding, John C. Gilbert, executive secretary of the civil service commission, in a letter received by City Forester Ryan yesterday, stated:

"I am directed to inform you that this letter (referring to a communication of July 3) applies only to Mr. Adams' position as foreman. The commissioners have no objection to his being employed in his former position as tree-climber."

Waltham Mayor Takes Row to Court

In his efforts to restore the Charles river at Waltham to its normal level, Mayor Patrick J. Duane planned to file a bill in equity in the Middlesex Superior Court, naming the Waltham Bleachery & Dye Works and the Boston Manufacturing Co. as co-defendants.

The mayor decided to proceed with his plans for a court fight when his negotiations with the concerns to reduce the amount of water that is being diverted from the river for commercial purposes proved unsuccessful.

Services Today for Hugh Montgomery

Funeral services for Hugh Montgomery, one of the founders of Montgomery, Frost Company, opticians, who died yesterday at his home, 32 Arlington st., Cambridge, will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Mt. Auburn chapel. Burial will be in Mt. Auburn cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Helen Evelyn Bonney of Cambridge; a son, Hugh Montgomery, Jr., and a daughter, Miss Priscilla Montgomery.

Inhales Ether

BOYISH EXPERIMENTS in anaesthetics overpowered five-year-old Francis Graham, of Salem, and etherized him yesterday. The boys range in age from five to eight. Police are investigating to learn the source of the ether.

BOY ETHERIZED BY GANG

While three young boys held him fast in their grip, a fourth held a can of ether over the face of Francis Graham, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Graham, of Bentley st., Salem, until the boy fell unconscious at their feet yesterday afternoon.

The four boys then fled and it was several minutes later that the victim's mother, Mrs. Mary Graham, went into the yard of her home to call him and found him stretched on the ground.

The frantic mother, unaware of what had happened, worked over the unconscious boy and finally succeeded in reviving him. When he had recovered sufficiently to tell what had happened, she notified the police.

The boy disclosed the names of the four who had attacked him, and police say their ages range between five and eight years. The investigation is being continued to determine where they obtained the ether.

Drowned Autoist's Body Still Missing

No trace of the body of Arthur C. Rowe of South Lancaster, drowned when his automobile plunged into the Saugus river Tuesday night has been found.

Rowe's young widow last night offered to post a reward, but was informed by Lynn police that everything possible was being done.

WOMAN SAVED BY TAXI MAN

Mrs. Margaret F. Healy, 28, of 2 Commonwealth ave., Concord, was prevented from jumping off the West Boston bridge last night by a taxicab driver, who had taken her as a fare at Rowe's Wharf, and who noticed the woman on the bridge railing after he had heard the door of the cab close.

The woman arrived at Rowe's Wharf on the Nantasket boat in care of the matron. She was placed in a taxicab to be taken to her home. Charles Pfrang of 11 Dickwell st., Jamaica Plain, driver of the cab, was proceeding slowly along the West Boston bridge when he heard the cab door close. He stopped and looking about, saw Mrs. Healy poised on the bridge railing. Rushing to the railing he grasped the woman's wrist and pulled her back to the sidewalk.

In answer to his question as to why she wanted to jump, she replied, "I don't know." Pfrang notified Patrolman Leo Dimond and the woman was taken to the Central sq. station in Cambridge. Her husband later called for her and took her home.

Communists Prefer Jail to $10 Fine

Selling themselves up as martyrs to the cause of the Communist party, two men and a woman went to jail yesterday rather than pay fines of $10 each, imposed on them in the Waltham District Court on charges of distributing Communist newspapers in Watertown without a permit.

The trio were arrested while passing out the papers to workers at the gates of the Hood Rubber Co. plant. They were Goldie Waldman of Cottage st., Chelsea; Nat LeRoy of Granville ave., Malden, and Joseph Shiffman of Lynde st., Boston.

Troops Fight Blaze at Camp Devens

Camp Devens, July 25—More than 500 soldiers on duty at Camp Devens were called out early today to fight the second fire of the week, in which two barracks and four outlying buildings were destroyed.

For a time the entire National Guard area was threatened.

One soldier at camp with the 372d Infantry was injured when he fell from a ladder while fighting the blaze. He also suffered slight burns. He was taken to the camp hospital, treated for injuries and later returned to his company.

Help was summoned from Ayer and Leominster to assist the two pieces of apparatus of the camp fire department.

The fire was discovered by a guard on duty.

Members of the 110th Calvary, the 101st Field Artillery of the 26th Division, the Fifth Infantry, the 101st Ammunition Train and the 372d Infantry, totaling 800 men, fought the fire and prevented the entire National Guard area buildings from being wiped out. The burned barracks were unoccupied.

WILL PROBE BLAZE

The flames lighted the skies for miles around and the Camp Devens official telephone switchboard, as well as the Ayer police headquarters, were besieged with telephone calls.

Officials on duty at the camp declared that the 500 soldier volunteers were practically responsible in saving all the buildings in the immediate vicinity of the blaze.

Ladders were placed against the buildings and barracks occupied by the different companies on duty there and kept wet.

An investigation today will attempt to determine the cause of the fire.

Two unoccupied barracks, four bathhouses and a small lumber yard were destroyed by fire which broke out here Monday morning.

AWARDED MEDALS

Twelve students of the Citizens' Military Training Regiment here were awarded medals from the Military Training Camps Association by Maj. Chester D. Haywood of Worcester, civilian aide to the Secretary of War for Massachusetts, last night.

Because of the heavy downpour of rain the usual parade was called off and ceremonies held in the mess hall. Col. Henry S. Draper, civilian aide for the First Corps Area, also a visitor here today, was present and addressed the 882 students.

East Boston Girl Hurt in Collision

Miss Margaret F. Cassidy of 43 White st., East Boston, is suffering from a sprained arm and a general shakeup, received yesterday when the roadster she was driving was in collision with a truck of the J. B. Prescott Company of Bedford. The truck was operated by Lloyd S. Cook of Billerica, at Massachusetts ave. and Maple st., in East Lexington.

TROLLEY CRASH HALTS TRAFFIC

More than a score of persons were thrown from their seats in a Boston Elevated street car bound for Park st. from Watertown last night, when it crashed into the end of a Lechmere-Kenmore two-car train which split a switch in Kenmore square.

Trolley car service in the subway and along Commonwealth avenue was delayed several minutes while workmen replaced the car on the rails. None of the 30 riding on the Watertown car reported injuries. Many told how they were hurled from their seats, however, as the cars crashed. The Lechmere-Kenmore car had just let passengers off at Kenmore station and was empty.

The Watertown trolley was driven by Motorman Thomas J. Brady. Lloyd Mabee was the conductor. Brady told police the accident was inevitable as the trolley split the switch and left the rails on the Lechmere-Kenmore car train just as he was to pass by on the opposite rail.

SEEK TUNNEL TO JORDAN'S

Plans to save thousands of shoppers the daily delay of waiting for the red and yellow pedestrian lights of the new automatic traffic signals before crossing the intersection of Washington and Summer sts. were laid before the State Public Utilities Commission yesterday by Elevated officials seeking permission to cut an entrance into the Jordan Marsh Company store from the lobby of the Cambridge-Dorchester tunnel.

Representing the Elevated, Atty. Charles W. Mulcahy explained that with the proposed entrance direct from the tunnel, shoppers could travel through the store for a distance of two city blocks without adding to the surface congestion and to the streets and sidewalks, thus relieving the present traffic load.

Under a contract already made with the Elevated, the Jordan Marsh Company would pay the entire cost of building the entrance as well as the subway show windows, without reducing the space of the station platform for passengers. In addition, the firm would pay rent to the Elevated for the 10-year period of the contract, providing a source of substantial income for the Elevated.

Approval of the plan has already been given by the Boston Transit Department, which builds and maintains city subways. When no opposition to the improvement was advanced at the hearing the Public Utilities Commission took the petition under advisement.

Nine-Year-Old Girl Victim of Drowning

Elizabeth Burns, 9, of 26 Thorbe st., Somerville, was drowned while swimming in 40 feet of water in the lower Mystic Lakes, Winchester, yesterday.

Eye witnesses told police that the girl appeared to be swimming all right but suddenly went down and failed to come up. The body was recovered by Delmar Mariel, of 31 Lewis ave., Arlington. Life Guard William A. Ward assisted in bringing the body ashore. The child was in the water 30 minutes before her body was recovered.

South Boston Girl Saved From River

Plunging into Fore River at North Weymouth, Jeremiah Helery, driver of a grocery truck, today rescued from drowning Helen Peirce, seven, of South Boston.

The child, who was visiting Mrs. George Trevins of Signal rd., was playing on a raft and jumped into the water to wade ashore.

HUB 'REDS' TO DEFY MAYOR AND MEET ON COMMON AUGUST 1

CURLEY PUTS ISSUE UP TO POLICE

Canter Says a Demonstration Against War Will Be Held, Permit or No Permit

A mass demonstration against war, planned by the Communist party for next Friday at 6 p. m. on Boston Common, will be held, permit or no permit, Harry J. Canter, the party's candidate for governor, declared today.

August 1, the organization points out, is the anniversary of the outbreak of the last World War. Simultaneous with the Boston demonstration, meetings are scheduled for Lawrence, Worcester, Fitchburg, Gardner, Providence, New Bedford, Fall River and Manchester, N. H.

"We will hold these demonstrations whether we get permits or not," Canter said. "The workers have the right to protest against war, unemployment, wage cuts and speed-up. They are going to fight for this right. They can only get it if they show determination to go through with the demonstration under all circumstances."

Mayor Curley, when informed of the defy, said:

'DEBS' FASHION SHOW MODELS

North Shore society will cast its vote at a Fashion Show to be held at 4 p. m. Tuesday at the Arcade of the Garden Shop on Magnolia upon the "most successful" costume displayed by debutante models.

This event is under the management of Miss Susan Sturgis and is to be part of an unusually interesting fete for the annual "Gala Day" to benefit the Travelers' Aid Society of Boston.

The models who will display fall styles will be Miss Susan Wigglesworth, Mrs. George Vaughan, Miss Florence Fenno, Miss Elsie Brewer, Mrs. Powell Cabot, Mrs. Thomas Proctor, Miss Rosamond Borland, Mrs. C. L. Hinds, Miss Betty Carpenter, Mrs. Gilbert Stewart, Miss Betty Barrell, Miss Florence Crane, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., Miss Anne Dick, Miss Katharine Burrage and Miss Anita Sturgis.

A baby parade, led by Russell Burrage, Jr., as the Pied Piper of Hamelin, will be the morning feature of the all-day program. The parade will march around the garden shops, where a Punch and Judy show will be provided for the entertainment of the scores of North Shore children participating.

Mrs. Russell Codman heads the committee of prominent society women in charge of the Gala Day.

Newton Absorbs All Unemployed Labor

The extensive program of construction of public buildings and roads undertaken in Newton this year has apparently solved the unemployment problem in that city, at least as far as common laborers are concerned.

With projects totaling $1,400,000 under way, Mayor Sinclair Weeks announced that all Newton citizens who have applied for work as laborers have been given employment and that when he received a requisition for five more men yesterday he found that the list of applicants had been exhausted. He announced that about 25 more men will be needed next week when work on the new junior high school in Newton Center is started.

Waltham Mayor Goes to Court for Water

Mayor Patrick J. Duane of Waltham announced last night that he would file a bill in equity in Middlesex Superior Court today seeking relief from the water conditions in the Charles river, on which the city plans a tercentenary water pageant on August 12.

He will ask to have the Waltham Bleachery Company and the Boston Manufacturing Company compelled to cut down the flow of water over their mill dams.

Douglass to Quit Hospital Next Week

Congressman John J. Douglass of East Boston will be able to leave City Hospital next week, it was said at the institution by doctors last night.

The Congressman's condition continued to improve yesterday and he was reported as very comfortable last night.

Man Is Near Death in 4-Foot Fall

A fall of four feet may cost Walter Hanson, 45, of Lisle st., East Braintree, his life at Quincy City hospital. Hanson is an employe of the Cities Service Co. in Braintree. While walking down a flight of stairs in the pumping house he missed his footing on the fifth step from the ground and fell four feet. He sustained a broken back and injuries to his head.

Women's Colleges Benefit From Will

Several public bequests are made in the will of Miss Sarah Porter Eastman of Wellesley, allowed in Norfolk Probate Court, Dedham. The residue is to be divided equally between Mt. Holyoke College, Wellesley College, Women's Board of Missions, and Wellesley Congregational Church. All personal property is given to John Eastman of Wellesley, a cousin, together with $1,000.

ONE KILLED BY LIGHTNING IN COSTLY STORM

Four Children of Revere Man Escape as Bolt Strikes Him Down on Beach

Fair and warm weather, expected to last over the week-end, today succeeded the storms of yesterday, which took one life, injured numerous other persons and did damage estimated at more than $500,000.

Constantino Stanchi, 35, of 22 Cage st., Revere, was killed and his son, Vincent, 12, knocked down by a bolt, which struck the middle of the family group at Revere Beach. There are four children.

The official forecast: Fair tonight and Saturday; not much change in temperature; gentle, variable winds, mostly southerly. There is no storm area apparent throughout the country.

In Lynn property damage from the cloudburst was highest in the history of the city from such a cause, with a thousand cellars flooded and streets filled with raging torrents.

At the height of the storm in Lynn the city was without normal police protection, when a flood 10 feet deep rolled into the basement of police headquarters, paralyzing telephone and police signal communication.

The barrage of lightning hit three houses in Nahant, and several trees were felled in Lynn. In Shawsheen Village to the southwest, a bolt crashed through the side of a hospital in which 70 patients were lying, only a few feet from a room where a woman was awaiting the arrival of the stork.

All over Swampscott the floods raced through the streets, overflowing catch basins and rippling through foundations into cellars and basements.

Eleanor Wing, 12, of 146 Hamilton ave., Lynn, nearly lost her life seeking shelter from the storm when the flood toppled a 10-foot wall down upon the automobile she was sitting in.

Lawrence and suburbs were bombarded with a barrage of lightning and thunder, accompanied by heavy rain. Lightning struck a house at 59 Ferry st., causing an alarm of fire.

At Nashua, N. H., 13 persons standing under a shelter house at the 12th green at the Nashua Country Club narrowly escaped death when a bolt of lightning hit a steel flag pole beside the shelter house during the storm.

Fire Bug Search

In an effort to apprehend the firebug who is believed to have set two serious blazes in the Bleachery section of Waltham within a week, officials of the Waltham fire department and State police today continued their investigation of the fire that destroyed the former plant of the Davis & Farnum Iron Foundry.

Three Found Guilty After Lottery Raid

Led by Capt. John McGrath, of Division 3, a police squad today raided an apartment in Myrtle st., Beacon Hill, seized several thousand lottery tickets, and arrested two men and a woman.

Arraigned in Municipal court, Arthur Ginsberg was found guilty of setting up and promoting a lottery, fined $100 and sentenced to three months. He appealed. Charles Sherman and Marie Duprey were fined $110 each for being present where gaming implements were found.

Knights to Conduct Children's Outing

The fifth annual outing, provided by the Boston Chapter, Knights of Columbus, during the summer months for the children of various institutions of Boston and vicinity, will be held next Tuesday at Norumbega Park.

The children will be taken in special buses, and will include those from the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, St. Francis' Home, Roxbury, and St. Vincent's Orphanage, Cambridge.

Rudy Leaves Boston But He'll Be Back, Girls

RUDY VALLEE, after taking the crowd at Hampton Beach by storm last night, climbed into his new blue automobile and drove to Old Orchard, Me., where he will rehearse his Connecticut Yankees this afternoon before his appearance with them at the Pier there tonight. Rudy's secretary, Tod Dolan, is shown in back seat. Rudy reports having a big time in Boston.

RUDY TO TOUR CITY IN AUTO

Rudy Vallee, who took leave of Boston's girls yesterday to fill orchestra engagements in Maine and New Hampshire, will hurry back tomorrow and greet his adoring public in an automobile tour of the city.

After his engagement at Old Orchard tonight, Rudy will motor to his home at Westbrook. He will leave with a motorcycle escort tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

He will enter Boston from the Newburyport turnpike and will start his tour from Everett sq. at 12:10. He will proceed to Union sq., Somerville; Central sq., Cambridge; along Massachusetts ave to Huntington ave., to Copley sq., along Boylston st. to Washington st., to Scollay sq., along Tremont and Boylston sts. to Arlington st., along Boylston st. to Beacon st., and along Beacon st. to Governor sq.

At night he will leave for Cape Cod to fill another orchestra engagement.

Waltham to Portray Coming of Norsemen

Boy Scouts of Minuteman Council will pose as Vikings on a float portraying "The Coming of the Norsemen" in the Tercentenary river carnival to be staged on the Charles river in Waltham on August 12.

The float will depict the arrival of the Norsemen in this country in the year 1000, when the American continent was visited by Eric the Red and his son, Lief Ericksen. The latter is said to have entered the Charles river started a settlement and built a fort commemorated by the Norumbega Tower.

Boy Endurance Boxers Set 6 Hr., 15 Min. Record

A two-fisted challenge was hurled to American youths today by two Randolph boys who, with witnesses to support their claim, avow they boxed for 6 hours and 15 minutes in the Belcher school yard in that town.

The boys are Warren Robbins, 13, of Belcher st., and Thomas Brennan, 13, of Grove st., whose chums watched them battle yesterday from 10:15 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Not a challenge to fight but a challenge to beat their endurance record was hurled by the Randolph pair, who have added an hour and 15 minutes to the time set by two Somerville boys earlier this week.

Two Winthrop boys swapped blows for five and a half hours yesterday, but they fought in three-minute rounds and one-minute intervals of rest, and therefore did not meet the technical requirements set by the pioneers in this line.

Waltham Crash

Robert L. Drummond of Everett st., Waltham, is at the Waltham Hospital, suffering from injuries he received when the automobile he was driving crashed into a pole on Weston st., yesterday, skidded about 100 feet and was wrecked against a second pole.

Somerville Boy Injured by Truck

William Gauthier, 6, of Highland ave., Somerville, was struck by a truck, which then ran over the sidewalk and through a hedge, stopping on the lawn of Highland Congregational Church.

Firemen put Ladder 4 gave first aid, after which the child was taken to Somerville Hospital. He has a fractured skull and other injuries. The driver of the truck was Harry Korenblett of Revere.

PURITAN MALT

IT'S DIFFERENT

Quality and Quantity—Both!

It's mighty unusual to find both quality and quantity in the same product.

But Puritan Malt offers you both—at the price you're accustomed to paying.

And quality in a class of its own. Different from just malt both because of the high grade barley and the second-by-second watching in manufacture through the Controlled-Temperature Process.

—every second—every hour of the twenty-four—PURITAN MALT manufacture is supervised thru the wonderful "CONTROLLED-TEMPERATURE PROCESS."

'HOLIDAY' AT METROPOLITAN RANKS WITH BEST FILMS OF THE YEAR

PICTURE IS BIG PATHE TRIUMPH

The Cast

Linda	Ann Harding
Julia	Mary Astor

Johnny Case	Robert Ames
Susan Potter	Hedda Hopper
Ned	Monroe Owsley
Edward Seton	William Holden
Laura	Elizabeth Forrester
Mary Jessup	Mabel Forrest
Pete Hedges	Creighton Hale

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

SITTING IN TO SEE "Holiday," one's memory is forced to frame the thought of "Disraeli," that best picture of last year. There are points of talkie values that impel the comparison—deft directorial touches, exquisite staging, dialogue worth listening to, and rare acting. Thus the Metropolitan for its new week screens a photoplay which is certain to be named among the best pictures of 1930. It is so good it forces a reviewer to drag out more adjectives than the movies, these arid days, are wont to justify.

* * *

"HOLIDAY," JUDGED in its class, a photographed stage play, is a triumph for Pathe. Director Edward H. Griffith, and for several of the cast. Theatergoers will recall the footlight drama; outside of some pruning, it remains pretty much as it was, save that the camera includes more than the "legit" could set forth. There is the same subtle handling of the love theme of two sisters and one man, there is the same balancing up of the dramatic suspense with the frequent offering of real humor, much of it in the lines, and a great deal of it in the acting. All this is aided by magnificent voice reproduction and photography.

Ann Harding

* * *

PHILIP BARRY'S PLOT may be briefly outlined. A daughter of wealth, Julia Seton, meets her heart's desire, Johnny Case, a young lawyer, who is at the moment a playboy. Born without the silver spoon, he has had to work hard to get ahead. So the yen for the fun of a holiday period lies deep among his complexes. He has ambition—it is that when he shall have made his "pile," say about $50,000 or so, he will lay off until the simoleons are no more. Then he will go back to work. Old Man Seton is a crotchety ouse, to him the prospective son-in-law's yearning is anathema. Julia is under Dad's thumb. But Sister Linda is a bird of another feather; and Johnny strikes her as nee high in every way. Linda's love for Johnny becomes apparent to her brother, who is sympathetic, and to two of her friends. Johnny gets in on the winning side of the stock market for a net of about $40,000. This is his big chance. His plan results in a split with Julia; he decides on a European trip, alone.

* * *

JUST BEFORE the steamship sails, Johnny reconsiders. He announces he will continue in harness for three years before calling what we may term a moratorium on the sweat of the brow. It doesn't pan out, however; Julia and Johnny part company. This time Johnny is actually going to set sail. Linda hastily packs feminine kits, and speeds in a taxi from her home, with about 13 minutes in which to make the steamship pier.

* * *

MR. GRIFFITH HAS done a notable job in the direction. The scenes shift with praiseworthy speed; not once is there a jarring note. The action, so far as the dialogue form will permit, swiftly progresses under the pictorial sweep. Mr. Griffith's work is so smooth that the photoflim slips along with the ease of a scotch-ay cocktail. His master hand never obtrudes itself. It is to his lasting credit that he has turned out one of the all-too-few talkie masterpieces.

* * *

IN THE ROLE that Hope Williams had on the stage, Ann Harding again proves she is one of the best of screen actresses. She has a style all her own. Her characterization of Linda is warmly human, richly finished, wondrously convincing. Edward Everett Horton delivers the next best role; and other well portrayed characters are the work of Robert Ames, William Holden, Monroe Owsley and Hedda Hopper. Mary Astor steps high above her former "sweet girl" parts; she is here a revelation of mature histrionic development.

"Holiday," for the lovers of the best in talkiedom, has almost everything. Like "Disraeli," you can see it once, and then again. And again, and again. It is just that close to real life stuff.

AMOS 'N' ANDY CHEERED BY HOLLYWOOD FOLK

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, July 25—Amos 'n' Andy have taken Hollywood by storm. Tuesday night when they made an appearance at the Orpheum Theater, the whole audience cheered. If only some of the political candidates could get these two boys to make personal appearances, their election would be assured. Their immediate popularity is tremendous and has never been equalled save in the case of Rudy Vallee. All three were made famous by the radio, which seems to have a way of creating favorites for the screen.

Even over on the R. K. O. lot the property boys, the cameramen and the office help stop work when either Amos or Andy appears. They are about to start their picture, "Check and Double Check," with Sue Carol as their leading lady. Irene Rich will play Sue's mother, and Rita La Roy has been given the part of the vamp. Alex Robb also has one of the principal roles. Let's hope the picture is a good one for, if it isn't, millions of radio fans are going to be deeply grieved.

Louella O. Parsons

YOUNG CARL LAEMMLE, having taken Lew Ayres and John Wray over the top in "All Quiet On the Western Front," has no intention of losing sight of either of them. He has, therefore, made arrangements with Howard Hanks to direct an air special, featuring both of these players. Mr. Hawks is not only the director but the author as well. According to Junior, this is going to be the nearest thing to "All Quiet On the Western Front" that Universal will make this year. In other words, it's a super, super, super.

* * *

MARJORIE RAMBEAU has just signed with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play one of the leading roles in "Dark Star," all of which reminds me that she has been doing mighty well for herself in the movies. She should, too, what with her voice and personality and experience as an actress.

* * *

RUMOR HAS placed Mrs. Pat Campbell with first one film company and then another. I happen to know that Winfield Sheehan made her a definite offer for a Fox picture but the salary was not what she expected. At one time Mrs Campbell was the toast of the British stage and an actress of world fame. Her talent is still there, but she will have to do something on the screen before she is entitled to the salary of an established star.

Mrs. Pat Campbell

CLAIRE LUCE hasn't been kept waiting on the anxious seat for very long. So many actresses are brought here by various companies and sidetracked without ever having been given a chance. Claire was put right to work in "Luxury," which Guthrie McClintock, Katherine Cornell's husband, will direct. Miss Luce had no more than talked story, costumes and dialogue with Mr. McClintock when Raoul Walsh sent for her and made tests of her. The tests must have come out satisfactorily for she will now play the lead in "Women of All Nations" opposite Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen. This, if I mistake not, is the sequel to the Captain Flagg and Sergeant Quirk series. Miss Luce hails from Broadway, where she played on the New York stage.

* * *

ONE OF THE most distinguished luncheon guests at the Embassy yesterday was Burton Holmes who was the guest of John Archbald, eminent journalist and globe-trotter. Mr. Holmes says he has started work with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will release under their auspices a series of twelve travelogue pictures, the first being an illustrated lecture on Japan. Think how very interesting these talkies will be instead of the old film shown with a lecture on the side. At another table sat Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes. They are just back from Europe where they spent several months.

* * *

SHARON LYNN

"WILD COMPANY," which opens tomorrow at the New B. F. Keith's, is another success for Sharon Lynn.

WAR FILM ON TWO SCREENS

For the first time in his career, Richard Barthelmess appears on the screen as the hero of a romance which has no heroine. The picture is "The Dawn Patrol," which opened today at the Olympia and Uptown.

It is a story of war in the air —of the clash between British and German aviators above and behind the fighting lines in France in the year 1915. Barthelmess' role is that of a captain in the Royal Flying Corps.

The comradeship, the stoicism, the gallantry and determination of the men who held the "air front" for the Allies are the essential theme of "The Dawn Patrol."

GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

New York, July 25.

August, it appears, will bring 10 new shows and four more or less old ones to tenant some of the houses now cool, dark and unoccupied along Broadway. That should be a note of cheer to those who now dolefully scan the alphabetical list of advertisements that discloses only 14 shows in town.

The newcomers are "Dancing Partner," the new Belasco comedy that will move into the Belasco Theater August 5; "Suspense," a war play from London that C. B. Dillingham is bringing to the Fulton August 11; "Safe Investments," a play opening at the President August 11; "The Second Little Show," to be seen at the Royale August 25; "The Ninth Guest," the new Owen Davis play that Al Woods will offer at the Eltinge also on August 25, and others whose opening nights are not yet set.

These others are "Tattle Tales," a new revue now in Boston; "The Up and Up," a comedy by the authors of last season's "Subway Express"; "Words Without Music," which brings Lou Tellegen back to Broadway; "The Lawless Lady" and "The Bridge of Sighs."

* * *

The shows reopening, as the newspapers have been busily noting for the last few weeks, are "Simple Simon," "Journey's End," "Topaze" and "Young Sinners," the last except "Simple Simon" return to town August 4. The Ed Wynn show will be with us just a week later.

Charles Hopkins is home from England just about ready to do his part in the subscription season that his Charles Hopkins Theater will begin soon.

McCarey to Direct

Tommy Clifford, the 11-year-old youngster who appeared with John McCormack in "Song o' My Heart," will appear next in an adaptation of the Stewart Edward White story, "The Shepherd Newfounder," to be directed for Fox by Leo McCarey.

Elite of the "400" Is Having a Gay Time at Fashionable Newport

BALLOONS WERE RIGHT in line with the aviating activities of Miss Lilias Moriarti of Brookline, so she sold them at the fashionable annual garden party on Mrs. J. Nicholas Brown's estate, Newport.

Fashionable Week-End Wardrobes

By ANN ARDEN

FASHIONS may come and go as the fickle taste of woman varies, but it would seem that the ensemble goes on forever. These summer weekends, when we have to pack a complete wardrobe into a cubit of space, we realize how great a boon the ensemble costume has become. In it is found the answer to the problem of a costume which appropriately serves more than one occasion—an absolute necessity in week-end fashion itineraries.

* * *

NOTHING PROVES the practicality of a mode as much as the actual appearances it makes in a season. With summer well started, certain interesting new ensemble ideas have been jotted down as they were seen here and there.

* * *

FIRST ON this list comes the clever juggling of black and pink combinations. Then there is a note on an unusual fabric alliance in both formal and informal ensembles. And scribbled in another place is a reminder of quite daring effects achieved by evening.

* * *

WHEN PARIS puts a costume down in black and pink, you may be sure of some unique results. From early spring it has been apparent that the black and pink combination is a darling of the French coquture. Reports from the races, from smart dining places, from sporting fields, all repeat that knowing French women are clinging to this theme. Thus, of course, it is echoed here.

* * *

THE CHIFFON dinner ensemble pictured is in a lovely print of rose and green on black. The gown wears the sleeves, which are three-quarter length, ending in circular ruffles. The skirt, from hip yoke, is formed of circular sections, too. The neckline is slightly squared. The accompanying sleeveless little jacket is softly draped about the hips, and secured by Rose Guerts buckle. The long collar of the jacket is draped, with a ruffled edge.

* * *

WHEN IT matters to one whether or not a fashion purchase has a future as well as a very smart present, how skillfully one must analyze details. For details count as much as color when it comes to dating a fashion.

* * *

THE SLEEVES you are wearing now won't be the sleeves you will be wearing next fall; but these casual summer fashions are meant for serving the season only, and are not expected to survive for autumn. In new purchases, however, you will look ahead to fall, and have your weather eye out for promising sleeve effects, skirt treatments and draped necklines.

First of Series of French Readings Given in Home of Mrs. Curtis Guild

VICOMTE ALAIN de MAUDAIT gave the first in a series of French readings in the drawing room of the home of Mrs. Curtis Guild, Nahant, yesterday, which was largely attended. The subject of his address was Marshal Foch. Every Thursday morning for the next six weeks, the vicomte will lecture in French for the pleasure of a select group of the Nahant summer colony. Among the patronesses with Mrs. Guild are the Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Thomas Pelham Curtis, Mrs. Joseph F. Fay and Mrs. Charles Davis.

THE DISABLED EX-SERVICEMEN'S Exchange have arranged their Cape Cod sales to begin Wednesday, July 30, at Marion, where Mrs. George P. Hamlin sponsors the sale. On Thursday, July 31, Mrs. William O. Taylor opens her Buzzard's Bay estate for this worthy cause and on August 1 the sale will be held at the Beach Club, Chatham. Mrs. C. H. Baldwin will have charge of the sale at Nantucket on August 5 and 6, and on the 7th the sale will be held at West Chop, Martha's Vineyard, at the Club. The last sale will take place August 8, at the Tennis Club, with Miss Hope Gray in charge.

Miss Sarah Bradley To Wed August 9 in Camden Ceremony

MISS SARAH ELIZABETH BRADLEY, daughter of Mrs. Luther Bradley of Brookline and the late Luther D. Bradley, who was cartoonist of the Chicago Daily News will be married to the Rev. Norman von Post Schwab, son of the late Prof. John Christopher Schwab of New Haven, Ct., formerly librarian of Yale University, on August 8 at St. Thomas' Church, Camden, Me. Miss Bradley attended school at Hayes Court, Kent, Eng., and was graduated from Bryn Mawr in the class of 1929.

MISS MARGARET BRADLEY will be her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids will include Katherine Schwab of New York, sister of Mr. Schwab; Ellen and Katherine Haines of Philadelphia, Barbara Fatemna of Chicago, Mary Heard of Chicago and Barbara Greenough of Brookline. The bride will be given in marriage by her brother, Francis Bradley.

J. HARVIE A. ZUCKERMAN will be Mr. Schwab's best man and the ushers will include the Rev. J. Herbert Smith and the Rev. Albert W. Campbell of New York, John Potter Cuyler, Jr., of Princeton, Perry E. Faeth of Kansas City, James Pine of Baltimore and John Bradley of Brookline, brother of the bride. After the reception at the Bradley home at Camden, the couple will leave on a wedding trip to Europe. They will reside at 80 Gramercy pk., New York, on their return.

Surry Players Give Tea in Honor of Two Distinguished Guests

THE SURRY PLAYERS OF Surry, Maine, near Mt. Desert, gave a tea yesterday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Bulgakov, the distinguished Russian director and actress. The pourers were Mrs. William Houston Greene, Mrs. Elliott Wadsworth, Mrs. L. C. Madeira, Miss Eva McLin, Miss Helen Watson, Mrs. C. W. Tapley, Miss Delight Weston, Mrs. Boyd Smith, Mrs. Horace Mann, Mrs. William Peters, Mrs. John A. Peters, and Mrs. William Sauter. Miss Sylvia Weld, prominent Boston girl, is one of the players.

MR. AND MRS. GUY CURRIER (Sheila Locke), who were recently married in London, are guests at Baden-Baden, the health and pleasure resort in the Black Forest of Southwestern Germany.

MR. AND MRS. HUGH RANCROFT, who are staying at the Ambassador Hotel in New York, have been joined by their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox of Cohasset.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES E. COTTING (Constance Binney) are registered at the Barclay, New York.

Garden Parties at Essex Institute Proving Popular

THE GARDEN PARTIES AT the Essex Institute in Salem, the second of which took place Wednesday, have been a great success and largely attended by residents of the summer colony along the North Shore. About two hundred attended the one given this week, among them Miss Rebecca Benson, daughter of Frank P. Benson, noted artist, who was dressed in an old-fashioned costume reminiscent of crinoline days; Mrs. Daniel Low of Marblehead in a trailing green taffeta; Mrs. Seth Kelsey of Bosford in an embroidered organdy with leg-o'-mutton sleeves, and Mrs. John Elliott of Keene, N. H., in blue taffeta and a tiny black hat of the fifties.

GOVERNOR AND MRS. THEODORE ROOSEVELT of Government House, Porto Rico, will formally present their daughter, Grace Roosevelt, next season in Washington. The debutante granddaughter of the late President Roosevelt has spent most of her school years abroad in England and France. She is a niece of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth of Washington.

Clubwomen Asked to Help Boost Their Community Plans

Clubwomen are asked to create public opinion for planned communities in the report of Mrs. W. E. Minier, chairman, division of community service, General Federation of Women's Clubs.

A program, she continues, that will be as sensible for communities and almost as necessary in the interest of beauty, economy, utility and permanent satisfaction as a set of blueprints for a home builder.

Concreteness should be the keynote, she indicates.

That clubwomen have done much to make their communities livable and lovable, Mrs. Minier granted them, but she insists there is still much activity that demands the clubwomen's attention and efforts along lines of zoning ordinances, mosquito eradication and smoke control; water works and sewer systems; waste containers in public places; better handling of garbage; graveling and paving of streets; fountains for drinking and for scenic beauty; beautification through planting around municipal buildings, on streets, in parks; and flower garden contests and shows.

Amateur Writers' Club Gets Away to Good Start in Hub

A Boston Amateur Writers' Club has, for the first time in many years, started in Boston. Composed of a group of young men and women, aspiring to that pinnacle of professional success, the club gives considerable promise, at this early date, of achieving its purpose.

The group meets once a week at the homes of the members. Manuscripts are read and criticized, giving to the author the combined body opidion before he submits the script to the powers that be.

For those who do not express themselves in writing, open forum meetings are to be arranged in the fall with topics of current interest their discussion matter.

J. Kruzer Kelly is president; Frances M. Small, vice-president; Frances Keith, treasurer and Albert Wilder, acting secretary.

The club plans several fall meetings, to which professional writers will be asked to come and present practical writing views and suggestions.

State Federation Names Mrs. Stetson Head of Social Welfare Committee

By NANCY BREWSTER

The social welfare committee of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs next season will be presided over by Mrs. Frank C. Stetson, a clubwoman of 20 years' standing.

A member of the same committee which for the past three years was headed by Mrs. Albert Bradley Carter, extension secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Mrs. Stetson will follow along similar lines, with especial stress on the recommendations of the governor's children commission, which is to make its report next January 1.

Prison reform, as outlined in the report Miss Julia Jaffray, chairman of the division of correction in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and as reported in full in this column several days ago, will be a chief concern of Mrs. Stetson's committee, her program to embrace comprehensive prison corrective measures for the institutions of the State.

COMMITTEE'S PLATFORM

The inadequate methods of handling prisoners which prevail throughout the country, has been embodied in a resolution and sent out by the General Federation for support among the state federations, calling upon American clubwomen to endorse a platform that the prisons of the United States have as their goal protection of society, correction of the prisoner and prevention of crime.

Along these lines will Mrs. Stetson lead her Massachusetts clubwomen, with added emphasis that scientific means be used to render the inmates of institutions law-abiding members of the community to which they return.

Mrs. Stetson will further urge her clubs to give active support to the conferences on state institutional labor and to programs which they develop.

IN POWERFUL GROUPS

Child welfare is, of course, another important phase of her work and in this direction the committee will keep Bay State clubwomen posted on the progress of the governor's commission.

Mrs. Stetson holds membership in many powerful groups in the State, chief among them the Legislative Council, the Massachusetts Society for Mental Hygiene, the Massachusetts Civic League, the National Civic League, the Presidents Club, the Stoughton Woman's Club, of which she is the legislative chairman; Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, in which she holds a directorship; past president of Political Science Club of Lynn, Massachusetts League of Women Voters, Music Lovers' Club of Boston Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts and countless others.

Braintree Point Club Will Start Its Season in October

The Braintree Point Club has changed the opening date of their meetings and instead of starting the club season in September, October will bring their activities to the fore.

They have met in September in past years, however. Mrs. Ernest M. Vaugh is the club's new president, having succeeded in the post Mrs. Harry M. Haimon. Mrs. Irving F. Shedd, is the new vice-president. Close to 100 women belong to this club, meeting the second and fourth Tuesdays of the month at the Braintree Point Welfare Clubhouse.

President's Council Names Federation Committee Members

An innovation instituted this year by the new administration of the State Federation of Women's Clubs brings forth appointments of committee members by the president's council of the Federation rather than by the committee chairmen. Hence heads of committees anxiously await word from headquarters as to the identity of those women who will serve under them.

'Opportunity School' Plan Is Big Success in South Carolina

"Opportunity Schools" are quite famous in South Carolina, thanks to the South Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs. Designed to make better citizens, better workers, better home-makers, to gain more general knowledge and to improve mentally, morally and spiritually; also to learn better habits of health care, the schools are not only attracting capacity audiences, but favorable comment throughout the country.

South Carolina, you see, is making a desperate effort to wipe out illiteracy and is using every possible means for the advancement of knowledge among those who were deprived of an early opportunity to learn.

"Better literacy rating" is the Southern Federation's goal.

THEY HAD TRAFFIC PROBLEMS in good old Boston, then as now. The busiest corner in the city when this picture was made (1855) was at Winter, Summer and Washington sts. Today the big problem is regulating traffic with electric lights. Years ago you did it yourself. See the gentleman in tall boy holding up the hurrying pair and carriage so that ladies and children may cross. This view is from Winter st., looking east. No 226 is where the Jordan Marsh Co. store now stands. The Turnbull store at the corner of Winter and Washington was well known.

Raquel, Called the Black Lily, Sought After by an Englishman

CHAPTER 50

Late on a June morning Raquel sat in a garden dawdling over her coffee and rolls and gossiping with Greta, who had just returned from a visit to New York.

She was in Paris. Or in Neuilly, to be more exact—a suburb of the Capital of Beauty and of Fashion.

Above her a flowering tree shook its dainty pink and green skirts in the sunshine. The gravel had been freshly raked in the garden, and all around the air was saturated with the scent of roses flirting with the ardent sun god.

"Do you know, Greta," Raquel said, raising delicately pointed fingers by way of circumrotating, "I've been away from home—America, that is—more than two years?"

"I was wondering when you'd be ready to be shipped with a tagged labeled U. S. A.," said Greta, smiling her slant blue eyes quizzically.

"I wasn't thinking of that," Raquel said, listlessly.

"Why should you?" Greta asked, "We've got a pretty nifty little bungalow right here. Three floors, one en 'em with a glass front; our own ballroom, a studio big enough for a skating-rink, a flock of oaths, and a retinue. Five servants is a retinue—eh, wot?"

"I haven't thought about going back—since we took this house. It's more like home than any I have ever had. I was sort of restless, though, this last time you went over. You said you'd stay only two months, and you stayed four."

"But Alphonse did the trip in six weeks flat."

"Yes." Raquel's eyes wandered to where a rose-vine clung gracefully to a high brick wall.

Greta eyed her sharply.

"You seem to do fairly well without us," she said. "What's this I hear about some young English blood burning to make you Lady Somebody or Other."

"Eric Stafford?"

"That's the blokie. And what a name! Talk about your Limehouse nights."

"Eric is—he's charming," said Raquel, defensively.

"Of course, he is." Greta agreed. "You don't think I see the toast of the boulevards—is he noir—hanging about with a dead one, do you?"

"Please don't call me that—in his noir—Greta. I hate it."

"Why?" sagely. "It's a swell moniker. The Black Lily. With a name like that, a girl ought to be able to wangle most anything she wants."

"It sounds—unhealthy."

"So do orchids. But plenty of us are willing to take a chance and wear 'em. I'll admit the blokie who tagged you with the moniker that night in Montparte was on awful egg, but he had a bowl of an idea. All Paris has taken it up. To Paris you're le lis noir.

"I saw Bertie Adams in New York."

"Did you?" she asked.

"Yes. He told me how you gave him a hard walling. But the palest will recover. He's engaged to some little doll who rides to the hounds on Long Island. A debutante, if you know what I mean."

Fast Worker

Is Mrs. Dexter

"I'm glad," said Raquel, with the wraith of a smile, "Bertie deserves the best."

"Then he ought to have got you," said Greta, loyally.

"By the way," Greta chuckled, "I saw your rival at Ciro's last night."

"Rival? Who?" Raquel wanted to know.

"Mrs. Dexter. Next to you, she's the hot choice of the judges for the Lily Cup. She certainly is a fast worker, that one. There was a cloud of men buzzing around her, too. And the rest of the entries in the international beauty race that goes on in this burg without ever closing the gates, were giving her the evil eye."

"She's the loveliest-looking woman I ever saw," Raquel said, ingenuously.

"She ought to be." Greta said. "You made her what she is today. Your and Alphonse's. By the way, what did she do with the appendix?"

"Appendix? I didn't know she was ill——"

"Sure, Appendix. Husband. The one who fell for the snake-charmer."

"Greta;" Raquel expostulated. "You get worse and worse of better. If you are talking about Mr. Dexter, the last time I heard of him he attempted to jump into the Seine because Mrs. Dexter wouldn't see him."

"Didn't tell me the goddesses went and spoiled the party?"

"Yes, they caught him in time."

"Men!" she said.

Only beauty, physical beauty, could fan that dead passion to flame again. He had been too selfish, too self-centered to awaken a want for beauty in his wife. It was easier to find beauty, ready-made, elsewhere. Yet when he discovered how he had cheated himself, he yelped like a coyote in a trap.

"And Mrs. Dexter," Raquel thought not loud so that Greta might follow, "She cheated about love. Sick in mind and body, for all her money. Love was what should have been her. But since she's found beauty and power to make men love her, she's stopped crying for love."

"Exactly," said Raquel. "She's learned wisdom."

Eric Arrives

And Meets Greta

"That must be—Eric," said Raquel, fluffing up the sable cloud of her hair.

"Sir Reginald!" exclaimed Greta, "so early in the morning! This is serious."

Raquel laughed softly. She had risen and was waiting for an alert figure that hurried along the gravel path to greet her.

Greta saw a man of medium height, close-knit, blondish, with the ruddy tan of the out-door Briton. An air of distinction sat easily on his broad shoulders. His face was keen, yet merry. His sensitive lips seemed bent on retaining a line of firmness that wanted to curve into a smile.

"I've been anticipating this pleasure," he said when Raquel presented him—with pride in her voice, Greta thought. "Miss Rojos has been inconsolable without you."

"It don't look that to me," tinkled Greta, sagely.

What's in Fashion?

Bedrooms as Living Rooms

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

New York, July 25—Many a fashion-knowing bedroom these days is comfortable enough to be a living room, too.

And in not a few homes you'll see bedrooms used as sitting rooms—so comfortable are they.

With a restful boudoir chair, for instance. Or a wing chair, or lounge chair. Or chaise longue to stretch out on with a book.

If your bedroom is done in the popular non-period walnut style . . . you've no problem at all. Most anything harmonizes with it—period or non-period.

If your room is furnished in an 18th century mahogany style, you can have lots of fun with making any slant top desks, a tilt-top tea table or mahogany book table and a boudoir chair.

Suppose it's Early American maple . . . one of the most popular styles of bedroom decorative there is. A wing chair goes with it . . . and you know how comfortable and restful they are.

The small butterfly table is a fine piece for an Early American bedroom. While a desk that looks like a high chest of drawers—and combines some of the features of both pieces—has no end of usefulness and decorative possibilities.

You can use these same pieces in a French Provincial bedroom. Or try ladder back or Windsor chairs. Or one of those solid wood frame chairs made comfortable with cushions.

Painted Furniture

What are you going to do if your bedroom is equipped with painted furniture?

You'll find extra pieces that can be harmonized. But if you don't find exactly what you want, there's everything in the world to make your bedroom comfortable . . . in unpainted furniture, Tables, chairs, book shelves, desks, footstools.

Have them painted to match.

Desk-on-Stand

Or . . . better still—in lots of folks' estimation, paint them yourself!

Heart and Home

Try the Other Boys

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 16 in love with a boy seven months younger. No matter what I do I cannot attract his attention although I speak to him. It seems all other girls have a way with him but I haven't. Whenever I speak to him he never shows the slightest attention. In other words, he shuns me. I am considered pretty. Can you please show me how I might attract his attention? BILLIE.

Dear Billie: Don't be foolish and shun all your other friends for the sake of someone who apparently thinks you are chasing him. There is no hard and fast rule for attracting a man. It just seems to be "one of those things." I think the best method would be for you to develop your personality on the other boys who seem to think so much of you, and then, maybe, you will feel any great attraction for them. The more practice you can get with various types the more you will be able to understand the man you want to attract.

Would Win His Love

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a boy of my age. I was out with him once and to a party once where he was. But now when I see him he never asks to take me out and when I meet him on the street he hardly speaks to me. What can I do to win his love? I tried to like a lot of other girls, but none speaks of him liking me.

LONESOME BILLIE.

Dear Lonesome Billie: Evidently you made no more impression on him than all his other girl friends, and if I were you I should not waste any more time on him. There must be plenty of boys there who would be glad to "take you out," and if there aren't, well, can't you find some extra ability, take an interest in others and try a little charm stuff on them?

Wants Sweetheart

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 20 and have had many boy friends. It seems to me that every boy friend I go out with doesn't mean a thing. Don't you think it's about time I had a sweetheart? I am wondering if I will get one or not. WONDERING.

Dear Wondering: Not necessarily. At any rate, you can't sit down and expect them to come ringing at your door bell. Go out and be a joiner. Make contacts through clubs and churches, and see if you can't meet a few nice men that way. You've got lots of time yet.

Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer readers' questions regarding love problems which may be troubling them. Write on one side of the paper only.

Keep Your Knees Pretty

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

Have Beautiful Knees

THE ONLY THING I really regret about the return of longer skirts is that I'm afraid you'll stop trying to keep your knees and legs pretty!

With these members safely tucked away under concealing garments it would be easy to devote the time spent to the development of their contour to other purposes and, being weak women, most of us don't do any more than we have to!

But please don't fall back into the errors of olden days. There will be lots of times when the legs and knees do show. Right now the beaches are full of shapely legs in far greater numbers than ever before. This is true, I believe, only because we've spent so much time making them shapely during the short skirt era when it was absolutely necessary to put our best foot forward, as it were.

The long skirts haven't been in long enough for us to slip out of routine yet and so most of us are safe for the bathing season this year. But, there are other summers to come and it's quite safe to assume that no matter how long and wide skirts become for usual wear we will never slip back to the voluminous bathing costumes of 15 and 20 years ago. Wouldn't that be ghastly!

Josephine Huddleston

Whatever would we do with such bloomers and skirts over them?

Then, too, sports outfits aren't so very much longer than they have been and certainly a girl's knees are in evidence when she's dashing about the tennis court and enjoying similar activities.

I think the knees probably will show the relaxation from exercising more quickly than the lower limbs, and so today I'm going to concentrate on some treatment and an exercise for keeping them firm and shapely.

The exercise commonly used to straighten bowlegs is a peach to break up fatty tissue around the knees because it places such a pull on the muscles holding the knee caps.

It is quite simple to do. Just take the correct standing position—torso drawn to its full height, head up and arms hanging relaxed at the sides. The heels, however, should only be about one inch apart instead of three as is usual with the correct standing position and the toes should be pointed out at an angle instead of straight ahead.

Without moving this position of the feet, tense the muscles of the legs and thighs and slowly push the knees as close together as you can. Hold the position for a second, relax, and repeat 25 times. After a few days the number of times the muscles should be tensed and the knees pushed together may be increased to 50.

Do the exercise several times each day.

Incidentally, if you are inclined to be knock-kneed reverse the action of the exercise, even for reducing the knees, by pushing the knees as far apart as you can—instead of pushing them as close together as possible—without changing the position of the feet. The same number of times for doing the exercise should be followed that given in the previous exercise.

In addition to the exercise you will find that applications of reducing lotion, twice daily, will prove effectual in speeding up the desappearance of the excess fat. This lotion is made by adding two ounces cakes of camphor, cut up fine, to one quart of ordinary rubbing alcohol. Let stand for 24 hours. Then put the liquid on generously twice each day. DON'T rub it in but rubbing sometimes causes slight irritation which is entirely avoided by merely patting the lotion on lightly.

Within a few days now we'll review some of the best exercises for keeping the legs lovely without too much time and effort.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

MASQUERADE

Many lives are masked always,
Little can we know
From their wonted outward phase
Of the heart below.

Though their days may lack repose,
Cares may vex the mind.
Still the soul's deep current flows
Undisturbed and kind.

Gruffness sometimes serves to hide
Tenderness and love;
Noblest virtues may abide
With grim blance above.

Masquerade is everywhere.
Earth, indeed, a stage;
Youthful spirits don white hair,
Wear the garb of age.

Be not likely led astray
By a masking mood;
Seek, in all along your way,
Hidden stores of good!

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Bridge Widows

NEARLY EVERY woman can get a lot of consolation out of looking at the bridge widows in some other woman's husband.

Every woman can find another woman who has taken a worse matrimonial risk than she has. This is the popular idea of the "Christian spirit"—to thank heaven for your blessings, and incidentally in fact, to feel the thought that somebody else is worse off than you are.

The golf-widow can congratulate herself that she is not a poker-widow, and that golf is a daytime game, and not an all-night session. And the poker-widow, in turn, can take comfort in the fact that she is not a golf-widow. Besides she has her husband's weakness, and can sympathize with "that poor little woman," who is married to the golf-chaser in the next apartment.

The woman, whose husband cannot be dragged out of the house evenings, can rejoice when she think of the woman whose husband has to be dragged INTO the house most mornings.

The wife of the attractive dentist, whose business is to hang tenderly over the pretty women's shoulders all day, can count herself lucky when she thinks of the fate of the woman who is married to the fascinating doctor, who must take the poise of one chair lady-in negligee after another, in one scented boudoir after another.

Being a golf-widow or a poker-widow is sad enough; but to be married to a BRIDGE MANIAC is probably the direst fate of all.

There is a peculiar kind of bridge-temper which has led loving couples into ways that ended in throwing the ash-trays and vases at each other's heads as signals of each other's departure from the table. And there is a bridge grouch which can fill a whole drawing room with ominous, black gloom.

The bridge-divorce, which begins in a badly-played hand and ends in a fight for the custody of the children, is getting to be an every-day thing.

Alas, the wife of the bridge maniac and the husband of the bridge-fiend can think of NOBODY who might envy them! Nobody, in their opinion, is worse off!

Pointers on Etiquette

By MRS. BEECKMAN

The Recipient of Wedding Gifts

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—How soon after my wedding should I thank our friends for their gifts?

2—What would I say in a letter, or in a card correct?

3 When signing the letters, should I put "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith" or "Mrs. J. Smith" or just my own name, "Jane?"

MRS. R.

1—Your friends should be thanked for their gifts before your wedding. Each day write notes for the gifts that you have received that day (this is the well-bred thing to do) and indicates to your friends that you were so happy to receive their gift that you just had to write a note thanks at once.

2—A card is not correct to use for a thank-you note. Write all of your notes of thanks on double-sheeted letter paper and make your notes just as expressive and articulate as you can.

3 Sign your name in your note, since all persons are sent to the bride and bring to her.

Inviting a Young Man to a Party

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Is it polite for a girl to hold to a car strap while standing?

2—What is the best way to ask a young man to a party? I do not want to write, but want to ask him verbally.

3—Is it all right for a girl to send a boy a postcard or rather to telephone him?

1—That's what they are for, lady! And we had best use them for our neighbor's safety.

2—The best form to write a note of invitation, unless you know the man exceptionally well. It is the more thoughtful for us to send such an invitation as that it will not make it "so easy to say regret" the invitation if he wishes to.

3—It is friendly, if she is traveling, for a girl to send a man a postcard, to greet him. But it is wiser for her not to telephone him unless it is really necessary for her to do so.

Responsibility of the Hostess

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please settle an argument for us? A says that when a girl asks a young man to a dance, the girl should pay all expenses. B says that the young man should pay. What do you think about this?

CONSTANT READER.

I agree with A.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

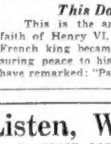
Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Follow Kisagotami

DO YOU feel that life has been particularly cruel to you? Are you carrying some burden which you're sure no one else can understand? Then listen to the story of Kisagotami and Gotama, the Buddha.



Elsie Robinson

She was only a baby herself, child of India's girl mothers, and she adored her tiny brown son with the unreasoning passion of a child.

For a year they played together in the green walled garden of her husband's home. Then, just as he took his first toddling steps, her baby died. Heartbroken, poor Kisagotami fled into the streets with the dead baby clasped in her arms and wandered from house to house asking help.

"Give me some medicine that will bring my baby back again, sahib!" she cried to every neighboring home could only shake their heads and turn away.

Then a man named someone sent her to the Buddha—and looking at her with his wise old eyes he saw all the terror and bewilderment in her tortured young heart.

So he said, very gently, "Yes, I will make you some medicine, Kisagotami." Then joyfully she cried: "What herbs will I bring to you for the medicine, master?"

"Only some mustard seed," he answered. "But wait," he continued, for she had turned to go joyfully up as simple an errand. "You must get that mustard seed from a house where no sonn, or husband, or parent or slave has died."

So Kisagotami went out happily, kissing her dead baby, feeling sure that soon it would open soft eyes and coo at her again. For surely, it would be easy to find such mustard seed.

But when she asked at the first house, another mother whose eyes were faded with weeping, answered: "Mustard seed have I plenty, but no longer a son. For thrice have the arms of death round me will look wild and distraught upon the noble forehead of the Sweet Sing whose name is as the name of God. The trouble with wedded eyebrows was that one set was precisely and symmetrically the same as the next one, giving to the countenance no individuality.

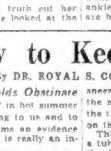
Weak ankles can be strengthened by walking on rip toe. A good exercise is to swing the foot in and out from the ankle. Run-over heels weaken the muscles of the ankles and calves, and spike heels aid bad when this condition exists.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Hot Weather Colds Obstinate

"TAKING COLD" in hot summer weather is disgusting to us and to our friends. It is also an evidence of weakness, and it is really an indication of weakness that the system is out of gear.



Dr. Copeland

When you lose sleep, eat meals at all hours, and work hours and hours at hard work in dusty, smoke-laden rooms you are sure to have a disagreeable reaction. The first thing you know you are sneezing and coughing, and maybe you have started the most obstinate kind of a cold.

You are liable to colds if you neglect your baths regularly. In hot weather, when the body wastes are thrown off by the skin in the perspiration, daily bathing is imperative if the skin is to be kept in good condition.

Cleanliness of the mouth and teeth is essential. The germs of colds, influenza and tuberculosis are ever present to make inroads in the body by way of the nose and mouth. The nostrils and mouth should be kept clean because they are the hiding places of many kinds of germs.

With a reasonable care of our bodies we do not need to fear these germs. But when we are tired out from over-doing in the habits of living and eating, then it is that the resistance to disease is low and we are ready for the germs.

As a matter of fact, we are terribly careless of these bodies of ours. Haven't you seen boys and girls throw themselves, overheated, on the grass after a strenuous game of tennis, or even go in bathing when they are overheated. Then comes a chill, and deep may be made ill by the quick chilling of the body.

The condition called a "cold" is almost always accompanied by constipation. One of the causes of constipation is eating too rapidly. Eat slowly. Don't bolt your food. Chew it thoroughly. Do this because the processes of digestion begin in the mouth.

The time to deal with a cold is in its first stages. When you have a sneeziness, chilliness, running of the nose, sneezing or burning of the throat you may know trouble is on the way.

The best thing to do is to get into a Turkish bath as soon as you hear it. Add hot water as it cools. Keep this up for some time. Then go to bed with hot drinks and drink a lot of hot water or hot lemonade after you get into bed. This will bring on a perspiration, and in this way the poisons are more quickly thrown off from the body. After the perspiration is over, sponge off with cool water and get into a dry bed for a good sleep. You probably will feel much better in the morning on waking.

Every cold that can be spent out of doors in the summer time is a distinct asset for the coming winter months indoors. Without plenty of sunshine and fresh air, at least moderate exercise every day, and a proper amount of rest and sleep and well-balanced and regular meals, good health cannot be maintained. Live rightly and the summer cold will be a thing of the past.

Columbia River Irrigation Tract Seen from Plane

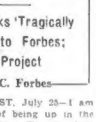
—By B. C. Forbes—



B. C. Forbes.

IN THE WEST, July 25—I am often accused of being up in the air when I write. For the first time in my life I have gone up in the air physically.

Arriving at Spokane, I was calmly, matter-of-factly informed that I was to be flown over the Columbia River basin irrigation project. Couldn't it be done by motor? I stalked. No, that would take a day. Days? How big is this basin? I was told to stay on the ground. Three million acres.

Let me make a confession. For years I have dodged flying. To sort of cover up my cowardice I always suppressed invitations by some such explanation that, having a small army of little fellows dependent on me for their shoes and clothes and victuals, I really didn't think I had any right to indulge in flying. I had any right to indulge in flying simply for the purpose of getting a new thrill. I added usually that if the time ever came when any such purpose would be served by my soaring into the air, why, of course, I wouldn't hesitate.

But hesitate I did, just the same. It was settled as most things are settled for married men. My wife informed the delegation that I would fly, that she would go along to see that I did fly, also.

Confession number two. For the first half hour I was much more interested in my own mental cogitations than in the land below. My interest in it was confined to what kind of a forced landing it would provide. It looked tragically bumpy, not to say monotonous. Presently our genial master of ceremonies, Roy R. Gill, public spirited citizen, who has been giving years of unremitting and enthusiastic service to the furtherance of the colossal project, leaned over and shouted that land, as it is, isn't good for anything, not even for landing a plane.

Job's comforter. However, misgivings are a polite word for fear—wore off as we kept on and on. Every now and again the ship's tank was announced and lunch towards the earth, making you feel that your anatomy threatened to divide fifty-fifty. Long before the 250 miles had been covered flying had become a matter-of-fact experience and sensation.

I shall again if it will help accomplish anything, old fogey though I am.

Here again, I have just realized, I have gone up in the air in my writings. But, you know, one can write only about what one is thinking.

* * *

Now for the Columbia Basin enterprise. Mr. Gill supplied this brief statement, under the caption "What Is It?":

"The Columbia Basin irrigation project embraces 1,563,000 acres of arable desert land in south central Washington. Less than one-third of the water of the upper Columbia river will irrigate it.

"Thirty years will be required to construct and people it with farmers.

"When completed it will provide a market annually for $100,000,000 of eastern manufacturers.

"The project has been declared feasible by four sets of engineers, and has been endorsed by numerous conservation organizations, among them the International Bankers Association of America.

"President Coolidge said: 'The Columbia Basin project is not far distant.'

"Secretary of the Interior Hubert Work: 'Just as sure as time passes the Columbia Basin project will be built.'

"Senator Nicholas Longworth: 'It seems to me that Congress can well afford to provide credit that will enable that land to be flooded with water.'

"Herbert Hoover, when Secretary of Commerce: 'The initiation and construction of the Columbia Basin project is inevitable. It should not be delayed until we are overwhelmed with population.'"

More tomorrow about this Napoleonic project (and none about flying).

SENTIMENT IN BUSINESS IS IMPROVED

By FRANK H. MELOON

Betterment in the action of the stock market has had a very good result in effecting a noticeable improvement in business sentiment. The decline of the stock market, on the other hand, had the unhappily effect of making many business men receive that conditions were worse than they were. The link between the big financial markets and business is very strong, partly because demand for the equities in American corporations is naturally affected by the condition of business.

Since "Woodman, Spare That Tree" was penned, considerable changes have transpired in the general attitude toward our forests. Corporations were once scored in Congress for promiscuous, ill-considered cutting methods of the woodlands. Now the big corporations having forest lands protect them for their own profit.

In one section of Canada it is stated a system of forest conservation is assured by well-ordered cutting and new plantings. The utilities have limited their forest planting to more than 21,500,000 trees have been planted in New York by Niagara-Hudson power group alone, in addition 5,000,000 will be planted this year in connection with control of water supply. Northern New York Utilities, Inc., is the leader, having planted 5,877,110.

State St. opinion, quoted in this column at the outset of the Federal Farm Board's experiment is buying wheat, appears to have been correct. Chairman Legge, who may have held like views at the start, is now convinced that purchases of grain for purposes of price stabilization are ineffective, when applied to cumulative surpluses, although they will work in the case of seasonal shortages. Logically, therefore, he states that the farm board has no intention of adding to the 500,000,000 bushels of wheat it has already bought in an attempt to bolster prices.

"We could apply a pulmotor and give temporary aid," he said, "but we are looking for a more permanent remedy which involves cooperation on the part of the producers. We are very hopeful of getting that."

Not only is the publishing business of today, as noted in this column recently, one of the world's best paying financially, but also it is one which brings to interesting points of view often very "gripping," as the film reviewers say.

Take these two quotations.

First from The Pathfinder:

"The greatest business in all the world—the United States Government." — Secretary of Labor Davis.

Next from The London Book:

"The United States Government is the most inefficient big business organization in operation today."—Thomas A. Edison.

The United States Government may be inefficient, but the status of its business as the Edison Enterprises indicates that investors, not all of whom are Americans, appraise it as the big business organization in which of all those in the world, they place the greatest confidence.

Otis Group Wins Cleveland Bonds

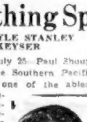
A group headed by Otis & Co., including Wallace Anderson & Co., New York, and Stern Brothers, Kansas City, were the successful bidders today for an issue of $2,000,000 City of Cleveland 4¼ per cent sewage disposal bonds.

There were 14 bids in all, the second highest bid being made by Chase Securities Corporation, together with Eldredge & Co., and Barr Brothers.

Hoover Conferences Gave Breathing Spell, Shoup Says

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, July 25—Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific Company and one of the ablest analysts of business on the Pacific coast, believes that the country is going to come through the present recession "in no great while."



Paul Shoup

Mr. Shoup believes that the present economic readjustment is putting the business life of the country on a sounder basis and is giving individuals a better opportunity to decide proper ratios between income and expenditure.

Mr. Shoup was one of the prime movers in the stabilization conference which President Hoover summoned immediately after the panic last fall, and he intimates that the setback would have been worse if organized business and not continued capital expenditures.

"The continuance of activities through the winter and spring," Mr. Shoup insisted, "following President Hoover's conference had at least the value of giving show room to a great many people, both as individuals and in their larger affairs, to make necessary adjustments."

Sketching the character of the readjustment, Mr. Shoup adds, in the Review of Reviews:

"The general feeling on the Coast is that during the last few years purchasing desire has been overfed, and purchasing power overstrained. The processes of adjustment, individual and company, now under way, however painful they may be, are unquestionably leading to the necessary stability. People have quit unnecessary buying until they catch up with their debts.

"Paper wealth represented in market values that never existed having disappeared, as usual, a great many people feel much poorer accordingly. They thus become more conservative with respect to spending—in some instances more so than need be. We find also that with less employment people who have income or jobs are carrying increased burdens in having to care temporarily for other people who are out of work or who have been improvident. This slows down the catching-up process which nevertheless is under way.

"The results of the vanishing of dreams of wealth, the long-term view as to the future which extended the company, personal and family debt on a buried-system beyond reason, and the saturation of desires even where purchasing power was ample, have all created a conservative state of thought, as well as brought home a realization of the actual state of the pocketbook.

"But I can say as to the Pacific Coast, generally, that there is rather unusual reserve of wealth well distributed, that there is a quite cheerful state of mind, and a very marked assurance that we are going to come through this sink without sinking, in no great while. Our chief trouble here is production on an efficient basis that does not find commensurate markets (many quite distant) in purchasing power or purchasing desire."

CURB MARKET TRADING IS LISTLESS

New York, July 25—Trading in Curb stocks was lifeless today and price changes inconsequential. The market was almost completely lacking in initiative, either one way or the other, and not even the normally active utilities turned over in any volume.

Fluctuations of a point or two were exceptional. Among the few stocks that varied to such a modest extent were Eastern States Power B, American Gas & Electric and Tampa Electric, all taking an upward trend.

Despite the favorable turns in oil production, including the announcement of new curtailments in Pennsylvania crude, the petroleum shares did nothing. Cities Service, the usual leader in volume, was exceedingly quiet.

Industrials and specialties managed to hold their own. Driver Harris moved higher, but such recent favorites as Ford of England and Anglo-Chilean Nitrate were inconsequent. Deere, American Tobacco "B," Technicolor and Walgreen were firm. Mining shares were dull.

United Founders continued its steep higher, but the investment company section was on the whole colorless. National Investors was heavy; Marine Midland a bank stock holding company which has applied for listing on the big board, improved fractionally.

Transamerica made its debut on the New York Stock Exchange today, thereby removing from the Curb list one of its most active stocks.

NEWS OF Trends of the Day MAJOR New York List MARKETS

Trading Is Again Sluggish on the Big Stock Exchange

New York, July 25—Trading was again sluggish today on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading decreased to around the lowest levels seen in a couple of years.

From time to time the bullish powers exerted themselves to furnish support for most of the pivotal issues. This kept the market steady to firm during most of the extremely quiet session.

TRICKLE OF BUYING.

Evidence of the piling up of unloanable funds was seen in the marking down of the call rate to 1 per cent in the outside market, for money loaned over the week-end. Business and industrial news was unchanged and commodity markets dull. Speculative evenings for the week-end was reported in the commission houses and selling orders were larger than buying orders from the rank and file of small traders.

A moderate trickle of investment buying has come into the market in the past few days, but on the whole the public response to rather widely disseminated buying recommendations of two large commission houses has been anything but impressive.

Bulls were inclined to feel from the start that it would be difficult to maintain a sustained advance, and a cautious attitude has become rather general.

Several important banking interests regard that a fairly bullish attitude, for they feel that a runaway market might result in a repetition of the spring and early summer crash, further unselling business confidence.

It has been notable, however, that the latter faction has become, if anything, even more cautious than the bulls. If further efforts on the upside meet with scant success, nevertheless, precedent indicates that professional traders will finally again put their hand at the down-side of the market.

The overnight announcement of a drop of $17,000,000 in brokers' loans, in contrast to forecasts of a gain of $50,000,000 or so, failed to generate any considerable enthusiasm. Traders perhaps remembered that the flurry of bullishness created by the unexpected drop of $21,-000,000 in the last full week of 2930 proved ill-timed.

A bright item in the day's business news was reported by heavy buying of copper, both for foreign and domestic use. Stewart Warner declared a quarterly dividend of 50c, an against 25 cents three months ago.

C. A. Victor management announced that production would be stepped up to full capacity by August 1. This favorable in its implications as a movement of substantial tonnage in prices of iron and steel products at Chicago warehouses.

RAILS SUPPORTED

Profit-taking in General Electric were the features, but failed to make much headway. U. S. Steel was well supported at moderate concessions on Saturday's close, and General Motors held fairly steady.

Anaconda and American Can gained a couple of points after opening fair quarters during the earlier hours of trading. Chrysler was a shade off, losing a few points.

Auto Strop sold up nearly 5 in response to first half earnings of 75 cents a share, more than double the like period of last year, but later reacted in profit-taking. Eastman Kodak gained an eighth, Curtis Publishing gained about 3 in response to first half earnings close to last year's and Stewart Warner gained a like amount on the dividend announcement.

Gillette, Mengel, Paramount, Loose-Wiles and Anaconda sold up moderately. Transamerica, first traded on this market, moved narrowly.

The market leaders developed more resistance in the final hour, recovering about half of their extreme declines. U. S. Steel, which had been nearly a point lower, showed a small net gain and Radio made up a dig of about a point.

Transportics, in its first day on the big board, lost about a point. Trading remained extremely dull, however, sales approximating only 1,150,000 shares. The close was firm.

News Developments Passed by in Wall St.

Wall and State Sts. are generally very susceptible to trade news influences. A characteristic of the markets this week has been to pass by news events, both good and bad, with apparently scant attention. This tendency to ignore news developments was reflected in continued quietness among the rail issues following the announcement Southern Pacific has secured control of the St. Louis Southwestern. Perhaps this general quietness in the rails reflected renewed stories of possible increased obligations of railroad stock holders in security houses.

U. S. P. C. INCREASE IN SALES IS SHOWN

Increases of 6 per cent in sales during the first half of July over the comparable period in June is reported by the Climax Engineering Co., of Chicago and Clinton, Ia., according to Allen C. Smiley, director of sales and engineering. The company is the leading manufacturer of distillate-burning gas engines, and this gain in business is shown in miscellaneous orders all over the country. Regarding the business outlook, Mr. Staley said:

"Our business has seen steady gains since the first of the year and we are hopeful that the reception of our new engines will show further advance in sales."

MEEHAN'S BULL MOVE BASED ON DISCLOSURE

From its wording, the M. J. Meehan & Co. market letter explaining its bullish stand is obviously based on the disclosure made here last Monday that the average price of all stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange is now the lowest since early 1925.

This column then declared that this disclosure was of sensational nature, since most popular "averages" show prices back only to two or three years ago and some only one year's recession in quotations.

The Meehan declaration emphasizes the drastic extent of the decline in price, taking the entire market, not a limited number of pre-eminent issues which always sell far above the main body of stocks. The firm also reiterated the opinion expressed in its world-wide advertisements that present prices of stocks offer buying opportunities.

CASE IN DEMAND ON ANY REACTION

Good buying has developed in the Chesapeake & Ohio group, in anticipation of new foreign business being obtained in the near future. It is also thought likely that the first half-year showed 100 per cent gain in profits, places the stock in the prime investment class.

YELLOW TRUCK PROFITS ARE TAKEN

Recession in Yellow Truck was a natural reaction to the exceedingly encouraging half-year statement, which full confirmed the optimistic expectations voiced here, but discounting by this issue in advance in the stock. Buying of Yellow Truck, however, continues to attract interests.

MOTOR PRODUCTS BUSINESS TREND

Some increased interest is being displayed in Motor Products on expectancy that slight betterment has recently been witnessed in its business.

STEEL EXTRA UNLIKELY

Declaration of an extra cash dividend at next Tuesday's meeting of the U. S. Steel directors would be in keeping with the liberal attitude of its leading interests. The bull contingent in the stock however, are compelled to maintain Steel common as their leader if they are to continue their sponsorship of the market.

TRIGGER MANUFACTURING OUTSTANDING FEATURE

An outstanding feature among the lower-priced stocks recently has been Briggs. The stock has been well bought on indications of the favorable earnings a week or ten days ago. For two years the company has been reorganizing and spending money on new equipment and machinery. The effects of this are now being realized. Good buying has been coming into the stock through houses which have acted for important interests in the past.

U. S. STEEL HAS CHANGED POLITICS

When the late E. H. Gary was chairman of U. S. Steel the policy seemed to be to stick to basic products—from which finished articles are made.

He also often remarked that Steel's policy would be to build rather than acquire plants. This policy appears to have undergone a decided change under the new management, evidence of which is found in the purchase of Worthington, with a year—Atlas Portland Cement Co. and Columbia Steel Corp., and the recent purchase of Oil Well Supply Co. And a number of other large corporations are following a similar policy, notably Anaconda Copper.

OIL STOCKS MAKE NEW FRIENDS DAILY

Oil stocks are making more friends daily. Encouragement in the oil structure the past six months has been even more rapid than the most optimistic had looked for. Crude Oil and gasoline stocks have been on the decline. Crude oil production is now 1 to 2 per cent under a year ago, when it was running 10 to 15 per cent ahead of preceding year. The most constructive development has been the continued increase in gasoline consumption, now more than 9 per cent ahead of a year ago. Oil stocks have acted well, but some say they have by no means fully discounted the improvement in the industry.

MARKET DISCOUNTING BUSINESS BETTERMENT

The market has been discounting belief that business will show better in the fall. Early in the year the market discounted belief that business would show better this spring, but there was no improvement, and the market had to undo what it falsely discounted. But there are better prospects of improvement in the fall than earlier in the year or in the spring betterment. Many lines are operating at a very low level, notably steel, automobile production and building. A betterment in production is not looked for in August, but things should begin to show up in September.

HUMBLE OIL SHOWING LIKELY TO BE GOOD

Humble Oil earned close to $11 a share last year and prospects are for a comparatively good showing this year. In first half it was the largest producer of oil in Texas. It is also the largest pipe line company in the world. Standard Oil of New Jersey owns 65 per cent or more of Humble Oil's capitalization and both stocks should move in sympathy, but recently Humble has been a laggard while Standard Oil of New Jersey has been active and strong. In the past 10 years a sum equal to more than the present selling price of the stock has been put into Humble.

Doubling for Love

piet how long that lazy helper of yours put in on this job. Here's your check and you'd better take it."

Mr. Muldoon sighing and shaking his head. Taking the check, nevertheless.

And Chick Furman, who was worse Chick, whose attitude was that no woman should be a lowdown enough to drive a car, sneering at Hannibal, kicking at the worn tires, swearing that nothing more could be done to the old tank pile:

"You get your tools and get busy, Chick Furman. And no tricks! No 'regrets' on the bill, do you hear? No putting anything out of whack, so I'll come back again. I know just what's wrong, and anything that goes bad from now on you fix for nothing."

"Say, who you kiddin'?"

"Nobody. Just telling you."

"Okay! Run her out to the dump and do the public a favor."

"That's all right, smarty. You do your stuff, and that's all I ask."

"Uh! Say, you gotta have them valves ground."

"I have not! And if you get grease all over the cushions you'll clean it off."

"Is that so?"

Peggy would say, "You might be a wee bit more tactful, lamb."

Peggy herself had a way of smiling and looking helpless, which proved oddly effective. Judy sniffed at such methods.

"Levels of evasion! Concealed old things! Think because I'm only a girl—oh, the villains! Look at the way the school board acted, putting that child of a Roy Varman over me, when all my grades were higher than his!"

"They've always had a man principal, lamb."

"Don't be coarse, lamb."

"Nothing coarse about pants. World seems to have been made for men for ages and we're living to keep in a closed corporation. What we need is more women who won't be run over."

She meant to be one of those women. She meant it more all the time, never as much as now when she sent a resentful smile at the door little Roy Varman had closed.

The smile did not matter until she removed the spectacles. Then it became outrageous because her full, beautiful lips so nearly were meant for sweetness instead of scorn.

Peggy turned the newspaper and found something which caught her quick attention. It was a sailing schedule of the excursion steamer "Mohawk" and it listed a first Cruise for the fifth of July.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

The New Traffic Lights

Pedestrians Must Be Protected

With patience and some adjustments the people of Boston will be able to make satisfactory use of the elaborate system of traffic lights in the heart of the city.

We can have in mind that the motives of the officials who devised and installed them were worthy of co-operation.

They were calculated to maintain a quicker flow of traffic through narrow and congested streets. More important, they were intended to eliminate the hazards, with their consequent toll of death and injuries.

Officials in charge should realize, and certainly do, that too much stress should not be placed upon the responsibility of the pedestrian for his or her safety. The new system surely was not devised to keep people away from the business district. Rather, the contrary is true. It was devised to make their shopping and business trips safer and pleasanter. If the system does not accomplish this, then it must be changed. Pedestrians must be given every help and every consideration, both in aiding them in crossing the streets and in mastering the intricacies of the system. Traffic officers must make this consideration of even greater importance than the expedition of traffic. Courtesy and patience on the part of the officers will help greatly in hastening the time when all are familiar with the rules. Pedestrians should not loiter in the streets while crossing, and should do their part by crossing only when the lights are with them.

Our women and children who come to our shopping centers are not track athletes like Paddocks and Wyckoffs who can race and dart and dodge across the streets.

The autoist must appreciate that in good manners as well as in law his liability for the prevention of accident is the more serious. A three-thousand-pound car at the rate of only twenty-five miles an hour is yet an instrument of potential danger. The pedestrian can delay him and try his temper, but at least not maim or kill him.

The Evening American has made the suggestion that bells at congested corners, to announce the shifting of the signals, would be of help. Presumably this suggestion will be tried out. Traffic officers doubtless will be maintained at busy corners, and it may be necessary to increase the number of men assigned to this duty, permanently. Other changes and improvements will follow as the need develops.

The system is still in its experimental stage and the patience and good-nature of both are essential to a fair trial of it.

One thing that every person, pedestrian or driver, should do for his own protection is to watch the signals and to learn what they mean. For their information the Evening American has prepared these simplified rules:

AUTOMOBILISTS—Go only on green light.

Green and yellow light together is warning for auto traffic to stop but is NOT signal for pedestrians to go.

RED AND YELLOW light together is the ONLY signal giving pedestrian right of way.

RED LIGHT ALONE, all traffic, foot and motor, stops.

MOTORISTS who have crossed the white line when green and yellow lights flash shall continue across intersection. Those approaching the white line shall stop.

Pedestrians in the street when red and yellow lights change to green shall return to starting point. Starting motorists must advance with caution.

Hultman Shows Them

More Police Blinders Removed

The Boston Police Department undergoes its most comprehensive shakeup since the notorious Garrett case revealed the orgy of graft and corruption which had fastened upon it.

Captain Galhwan had been at the Lagranga Street station only three or four weeks, but that was long enough for him to gain and report to Commissioner Hultman the existence of more than thirty dives and a reign of lawlessness which had flourished for years. The commissioner's action was prompt and decisive. Other district officers, if they still are in doubt as to the commissioner's ideas, may use the predicament of the 34 as a warning.

The young men and women of our day have plenty of attractions to tempt their good morals without submitting them to dens which operate in defiance of the rules of law and decency, which flaunt the public and which bring disrepute to respectable neighborhoods.

The transferred policeman protest that the reprimand was undeserved. Nevertheless some officers in the district must have worn blinders which hid the vile scenes from their sight. Perhaps the blinders were worn by orders from somebody or other.

But that is hardly a reasonable excuse. If they can protest now, they could have protested then.

The police can go to their tasks this morning secure in the confidence that Commissioner Hultman has taken the blinders off to stay and that the future performance of their duty will command commendation, rather than the disapproval of their former chiefs or of the political influences with which the wrongs may have been affiliated.

Boston has had enough of police inaction. Any change is for the better. Commissioner Hultman has a difficult task to rehabilitate the department. He may be trusted, however, to reward the good men and to punish those who cannot or will not perform their duties as they should. From this system will come honesty and efficiency.

McINTYRE ABROAD -:- By O. O. McIntyre

LONDON, JULY 25. London's rich merchants and dominant musicians inspired Hogarth to many of his unlovely etchings of life in the raw. And to me they give the city a good humored bustle and charm it would not otherwise have. They are an odd mixture. Half hoodlum and half Shylock—that poverty sprang up from its depths.

One ancient old soul on Cockspur st offered from her barrow the cool of Scotsbergen and the warmth of Sahara with rows of half penny dabs of ice cream, a mouthful on a stick and a tiny cornucopia of roasted chestnuts. Alongside of her was a sidewalk artist sketching the masterpiece he will sell for a sixpence when finished.

Thousands of outstretched hands offer every variety of flowers—from Scotch heather to daffodils. Taxi jump about on strips of black cloth to the surreptitious rugs of hidden threads. Matchsellers, balloon hawkers and cries of handkerchiefs, pencils, dolls and other play-pretties are everywhere.

On Haymarket a shuffling figure approached me in an effort to sell two-penny-worth of fish bait in a soiled paper. When I showed no interest he called after me: "Fine fishing along the Thames!" and cackled derisively, the triumphant author of the most juste fishing along the Thames is like fishing along the Seine.

No people the world over are as hopefully optimistic as the street minstrels of London. In a bleak, blind courtyard in the rear of the Savoy, a little band of four huddled in a drenching downpour leaving madly for more than an hour, although in that time only one small coin was tossed to them.

For the lovers of domestic pets there is a treat in store along Leadenhall Market filled with live stock shops. Here one may purchase marmosets, godfish, guinea pigs, kittens, bullfinches, bantams, guinea pigs, parrots and even bright eyed foxes for the chase—if one is that utterly heartless.

Bleak drab days have always had a charm for me. Consequently the fogs of London are a constant delight. They have a way of rolling up softly from a gentle mist and a deep, fugitive and mysterious density. The whole city seems to hang magically in a leaden sky. All that is harsh in its architecture is obliterated. There is indefinable beauty and romance in the wrath-like blobs of street lights. I always look for adventure in a fog.

• • •

Incidentally, I am told London has fog forecasters just as we have weather specialists in America. On the south side of the Thames is a spiraling chimney and when the first light mist appears the expert goes to the top and broadcasts his warning so that extra pressure may be given the furnace fires for the lighting plants all over the town.

Happy Baboon Family

But They Have Their Troubles

WELL-GUARDED BABOON BABY.

Three big baboons and one baboon baby are here seen enjoying the fresh air.

On the right the baboon father sits and, apparently, thinks. What he is thinking no man can know, if, indeed, he is able to think at all.

Some say that thought without language is impossible, because we cannot think except as we put our thoughts into words.

If he is thinking, perhaps the baboon father on the right is considering, in a vague and not thoroughly pleasant way, the very handsome, light-colored baboon gentleman on the left. He is no member of the family, but just dropped in. The supposition is that he is there to help protect the baby in case help should be needed.

Yet our baboon friends, "cousins" many times removed of ours according to the evolutionists, have their troubles.

Sometimes the baby dies—that is the mother's trouble. The father does not worry much.

Sometimes the mother runs away with another baboon. That is the father's trouble.

Sometimes the father baboon bites or even kills the friendly young baboon that drops in "just to be sociable." Our lower emotions—jealousy, hatred, cruelty and brutality—are all reflected quite faithfully in the lower animals, from whom, evolutionists say, we inherited them.

We also see our best instincts reflected in the lower animals. For instance, this mother baboon adores that baby, would willingly sacrifice her life to save her child.

Without that affection which nature puts in mothers, survival would be impossible among the higher animals.

By the way, it will interest some human mothers to know that this family of baboons in the London Zoological Garden has all sorts of advantages that many humans lack.

This baby baboon ought to be in the tropics. Yet, living in a climate not suited to its needs, its chances of survival are better than the chances of the average poor child in a big city.

H. G. Wells Writes

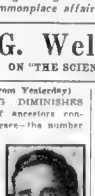
INBREEDING DIMINISHES the number of ancestors contributing to a race—the number of different strands of germ plasm that tangle and blend within it. And, indeed, it is found in practice that a strain which has been long inbred is more homogeneous, less variable than one which is cross bred and mixed.



H. G. Wells

To make the idea clearer, suppose that we start with a mixed stock (let us say, for simplicity, of pink four-o'clocks) and leave them alone to interbreed without any form of control.

Pinks, whites and reds will appear and mate; the genes will mix and separate and mix again. And nothing very much will happen. But suppose that we force the plants to fertilize themselves—the extremest form of inbreeding.

The pure reds will produce pure reds and the whites whites; but the pinks will produce reds, whites and pinks.

So that the proportion of pinks will diminish generation after generation. In a word, such an inbred stock tends to sort itself out into a number of races, each pure-breeding and homogeneous.

Now we noted that genes may be dominant or recessive, and that a recessive gene may be carried hidden in a race mastered by its dominant companion, and may continue so for generations without showing itself. This is true, for example, of albinism in rabbits, of hereditary deaf-mutism in man.

The effect of inbreeding on a stock will be to unearth these hidden recessives. They will be brought together in pairs, freed of their dominant neighbors and so made to reveal themselves. In rabbits, if there is albinism in the strain, it will appear; in the human example deaf-mutes will turn up.

And the opposite is also true; cross-breeding will conceal the recessives by increasing the chance of their being submerged by dominants.

Clearly the relative merits of inbreeding and outbreeding will depend simply on the recessives that the strain in question is carrying. If they are harmful recessives, inbreeding will be bad and outbreeding good; if they are desirable recessives, the reverse will be true.

In the case of the human stock to start with a concealed hereditary defect, any form of inbreeding is to be avoided, brother and sister marriage would be very dangerous, indeed, and even cousin marriages would be running a considerable risk.

Congress should be chosen from quite unrelated families. But in the albino-carrying rabbits the reverse might be the case; if their breeder wanted albinos he should inbreed them, and the closer the better.

If it be true (and, as a matter of fact, it is) this idea of the concealment or exposure of recessive genes is enough to explain the results of crossing and inbreeding is quite obviously bad and crossing is quite obviously invigorating.

But to do this we must anticipate the conclusion of a later chapter.

A species is not a static thing but an evolving thing. It is constantly being polished and improved by its surroundings, by a selecting action of the environment which favors some variations and strikes out others.

Mr. Coolidge on Russia
American Building Ideas
Farm Relief Attention
Not Elephants, Microbes

By Arthur Brisbane

IN HIS INTERESTING daily article, written for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other newspapers, Calvin Coolidge takes up activities of the Russian government in America.

Says he: "It is not the practice to inquire very minutely into the beliefs of foreigners coming here temporarily for genuine mercantile purposes." Spoken like a true New Englander.

Calvin Coolidge says also: "Our people are so thoroughly attached to their own system of self-government that we need not feel it is in imminent danger." Thus speaks a common sense American.

If a few "wild-haired and wild-eyed Communists," to use the common description, can upset the work of Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, and Lincoln, to say nothing of McKinley, Roosevelt, Wilson and Harding, then we need a more solid government.

It is now alleged that so-called "documents" discovered in New York, proving that "Amtorg," spending Russian money here, is a disguised agency for Bolshevik propaganda, were forgeries. A New York printer confesses that he manufactured the alleged official Russian letter-heads.

The appalling extent of Italy's disaster is due to the fact that in building, even small dwellings, walls and floors are nearly all made of stone, roofs of heavy tile. Earthquake causing even a slight disturbance, separating walls, allowed heavy stone floors and tiled roofs to fall through, killing the inmates.

It is believed that Mussolini will order dwellings rebuilt of reinforced concrete. Ordinary steel framing is too expensive; lumber, scarce in Italy, is too perishable to suit Italians.

McClintic-Marshall, an American concern, erecting the great bridge across the Hudson river, has devised a method of steel construction, extremely light, little more expensive than wood. Mussolini should investigate that.

This writer recently erected a very large residence by the McClintic-Marshall method, most satisfactorily.

Earthquake, lightning or gale could not affect it.

American "farm relievers," who have recently thus seen wh at go to the lowest price in 16 years, should be interested in results obtained by Russia.

Walter Duranty informs Mr. Adolph S. Ochs that Russian harvest prospects on farms managed by the Russian government are most encouraging. "Collective farms," many miles long and miles wide, operated by government machines, on modern "mass production" industrial lines, show a yield to the acre from 40 to 60 per cent higher than nearby individual holdings.

Peasants that had refused to engage in national farming at first now rush to join the new method.

We are the greatest, noblest, richest, most intelligent people on earth, but we should not disdain to learn, even from the despised Bolshevik.

In ancient days men gathered to watch elephants, tigers, bears, rhinoceroses, and other gigantic animals fight each other or fight gladiators. All interest centered on the BIG enemies of mankind.

Dr. Thomas F. Rlers, of the Rockefeller Foundation, showed other scientists slides explaining experiments with paiecosis, or parrot diseases.

The germs discussed are so small that they pass brough porcelain filters. No microscope is powerful enough to reveal them.

Science is not even able to explain how the germ of hippe or psittacosis, after yea of harmless inactivity, can suddenly spread world-wide, creing havoc, in a few months.

Rudy's Double Nearly Steals His Thunder

Rudy Valle came to Boston in almost regal fashion but an unidentified youth bearing a close resemblance to the idol of a million, razzle fans almost stole his thunder.

All because Rudy was an hour and one-half late passing over the route lined with thousands of cheering spectators.

Short a before Rudy was due to make his appearance at Everett in his spiffy touring car of robin's egg blue, the interloper, seated in the tonneau of a huge limousine, sped through the lane formed by Rudy's admirers.

The crowd set up a cheer and the stranger responded graciously the while fanning himself with a newspaper.

The impersonation might have been a complete success had not the unknown youth fashioned a hat out of the newspaper and stuck it on his head between bows.

At Somerville, also, a crowd numbering 500 were taken in by the pseudo Valle and cheered him to the echo as he swept through Union sq.

At one point he leaped from the car and shook hands warmly with several attractive misses who were quite taken aback by the special favors bestowed upon them.

When Rudy himself appeared along the route the crowd had dwindled greatly, but the reception was enthusiastic. The crowd had remained at vantage points fully an hour and one-half to get a glimpse of Rudy and was composed mostly of young ladies in their teens and children.

Shoppers in the business streets of Boston gathered along the curbs to pay him tribute and other hundreds lined the streets of Governor sq, as he motored to the Hotel Kenmore, where he remained during the afternoon.

FRENCH LEAD IN CUP MATCHES

Roland Garros Stadium, Auteuil, France, July 26 (AP)—America's hope of winning back the Davis Cup lost to France in 1927 faded today, as a remarkable French doubles team, composed of smashing Henri Cochet and the brilliant veteran, Jacques Brugnon, overwhelmed the American youngsters, Wilmer Allison and John VanRyn, 6—3, 7—5, 1—6, 6—3 in the only engagement of the second day's play.

The victory gave France a commanding lead of two matches to one to carry into the final pair of singles duels tomorrow, when Big Bill Tilden faces Cochet and George Lott, already beaten by the French veteran, Brugnon. France needs but one more victory in the singles to win the series.

In the advance of Tilden's conquest of Brugnon in his last-minute return to the Davis Cup wars on the opening day was lost as the highly favored team of Allison and Van Ryn, conquerors of the French last year and winners of the Wimbledon title this year, collapsed before the Frenchmen's guns.

With Allison erratic and way off form, the Americans won only the third set, and the impression was general that the French let that

FORMER MAYOR ARRESTED AT WIFE'S GRAVE

Spaulding Is Caught When He Returns to Manchester With Body of Mate

Manchester, N. H., July 26—A three-year police search for former Mayor Harry W. Spaulding had ended today at the new grave of the woman who had been his wife and companion through affluence and adversity.

Through years of affluence as assistant postmaster, then mayor of Manchester, and through hunted, haunted years as a fugitive from justice, Spaulding was blessed with the love and help of one woman.

She died a few days ago, and today—for the first time—Spaulding was in public here after a three-year search by police and the Fed.

From 1923 until 1925 he was comptroller of customs at Boston.

SHADOWED AT FUNERAL

On the trail and the authorities had never found trace of him—came to an end when he brought the body of his wife from New York to Manchester and police shadowed him through the funeral services to the grave.

They made no move until he had turned away from the new mound in the Pine Grove Cemetery, then they placed him under arrest for the alleged embezzlement of $2500 in Post funds from a Sandwich woman, a sale of which he was executor.

Mrs. Alfred F. Langley of Sandow, widow of a Freemont physician was the victim of Spaulding's embezzlement.

Unknown to the mourners, Sheriff Charles Symmy and Inspector Marshall Sullivan had watched the funeral services yesterday, trailed the cortege to the cemetery.

TIP FROM WOMAN.

Rich Widow Is Bride of Chauffeur

Watertown, N. Y., July 24 (AP)—Mrs. Pauline Sears Emphall, young widow of Frank A. Emphall, millionaire paper mill owner and department store magnate, today became the bride of Howard M. Hall, who had been in the Emphall employ three years as chauffeur.

The bride gave her age as 33 and said she was born at Dalton. Miss Hall's age was given as 30 and it was said she was born in Canada.

'MARANVILLE DAY' PACKS 'EM IN FOR 2 GAMES

"Rabbit's" Every Move Was Cheered; Is Given Auto, Gold and Silver

By JOE CASHMAN

Thirty-five thousand fans gave Walter "Rabbit" Maranville the greatest reception ever accorded a local ball player today at the Maranville day double header at Braves Field. The Braves lost the first game 5 to 4.

The fans' gifts to the midget, who has been baseball's greatest all-star stop and most colorful individual for close to a score of years, included a Hupmobile eight, a chest of silver, a purse of gold and several floral tributes.

There were presents to the Springfield kid between games, but his admirers refused to wait until then to start honoring their hero.

His every move in pre-game practice and during the opening contest was cheered lustily and the two bands present struck up a tune whenever he came to bat or did anything in the field.

To add to the enjoyment of the crowd, the Cards started Burleigh Grimes on the mound in the first game. Ever since the Braves sent the veteran to St. Louis for Sherdel and Frankhouse because he could not produce here after Judge Fuchs had spent a small fortune to get him from the Cubs, the local populace has been anxious to see him in action. They had their chance this afternoon.

LOSE $10,000 IN STOCK DEAL

A crew of stock salesmen believed to have "fleeced" an aged couple of $10,000, leaving them dependent on charity, is being hunted by the attorney general's office.

The people of the couple lost more than $7,000 and Asst. Attorney Louis H. Mayer, in charge of the stock sales inquiry, into investigating a suspected combination.

The couple is believed to be a group of New York swindlers against whom the attorney-general of that state recently began a drive.

"By a cunning campaign, the salesmen were able to win the confidence of the couple. They promised a large income, and through plister sheets were able to convince the couple that an investment was certain to yield immediate and staggering returns," Mayer explained in telling of the inquiry.

"Finally, when they had invested a total of $7000 without re-

BLOOD IN TAXI; DRIVER MISSING

A blood-stained taxicab, the windshield shattered was turned over to police today by its owner, who reported the driver mysteriously missing.

The driver, George W. Aron, 28 of Two Tobique p Somerville, had been in the employ of Samuel Covino of 178 Putnam st, East Boston owner of the cab about two weeks.

A checkup at his home and other places where he is known to have stayed at times failed to reveal any trace of Aron and police made inquiry at all Greater Boston hospitals.

There were bloodstains inside and outside the cab and the hole in the windshield indicated its size and position that a person riding beside the driver had crashed through it with head and possibly shoulders. There was no further damage to the machine however.

"I turned the cab over to Aron at 6:45 last night," said Covino. "I went to my stand on Canal st, this morning, but Aron didn't show up. At 10:45 along came Bubb with the cab. "He said Aron gave it to him in Bowdoin sq, but he wouldn't answer any questions. The cab had been driven more than 300 miles."

SURVIVORS OF ITALY'S QUAKES RESCUED FROM LIVING TOMBS

KING VICTOR COMFORTS VICTIMS

Mussolini Pushing Great Reconstruction Program for Stricken Zone

King Victor Emmanuel a 15-year-old girl who had just been rescued after having been pushed under a mass of wood and stone. Her legs were badly shattered, but it was believed she would live.

Physicians were working frantically to save 10 others who had just been extricated. They were in a grave condition, but faint heartbeats gave hope that they might be revived by oxygen.

OMINOUS WORDS

The new figures of the dead were contained in a report made to Premier Mussolini by Minister of Public Works Crollalanza.

The report gave the fateful totals with this ominous sentence added:

"These figures cannot be considered definite in view of the uncertainty which still unexplored regions of debris present, especially in the country, as well as the difficulty of calculation arising from the absence of families who may have gone away or who remain under the ruins."

Crollalanza said that in view of the altitude of several ruined villages and relatively short time in which winter would be upon the mountain territory, he has arranged that in districts sadly damaged temporary but cities would be begun. It is planned to build or enlarge the buildings later under definite plans and with what money is at the ministry's disposal.

He told again how the township of Aquilonia was destroyed, Lacedonia nearly so and Bisaccia affected only in one quarter.

Crollalanza said that statistics on the number of houses destroyed and damaged, as given in Under-Secretary Leoni's report of yesterday, would have to be increased.

CARE FOR ORPHANS

All of the injured, the official report said, have been placed in hospitals, with the exception of 1000 in a temporary nursing home and in under Red Cross tents at Santangelo Del Lombardi.

Definite steps were taken today to aid families having relatives in the devastated area and to give orphaned children into the care of special aid societies.

In some of the districts electric service today was restored. The water supply also was safeguarded.

The government announcement said that many of the first-aid stations in the quake zone were resuming operations so that the rationing problem from now on would be less serious. To avoid abuses and hoarding, ration cards today were in circulation.

The assurance that famine was not stalking in the wake of the earthquake did much to encourage the bereaved and destitute.

For the first time since the quake the public service arms in Potenza Province today were resumed. The public was allowed the use of telephone and telegraph to trace missing relatives. Heretofore the wires had been restricted to official business in connection with relief.

In the last few days 100,000 telegrams have been received at the Potenza postoffice. Most of these had to be delivered by mail.

King Victor Surveys Melfi and Other Ruins

Rechetta Santatonio, Italy, July 26 (AP) King Victor Emmanuel started back to this devastated city this evening after a day spent amid the ruin and misery of the area crumpled by Wednesday's earthquake.

The ruler had with him a comprehensive survey of the disaster and first-hand knowledge of the relief work.

King Victor listened intently at Melfi to explanations of the prefect, doctors and engineers directors of how the huge problem of recovering bodies from the ruins and burying them; preventing epidemics and housing the survivors was being met.

Melfi perched on the rim of a volcanic crater, and built around one of the oldest castles of the region, was a scene of desolation as the king and retinue, stopping went from one quarter to another and sadly surveyed the havoc.

VISITS HOSPITALS

The monarch, after urging the local authorities to do everything in their power to relieve the distress, visited the hospital and exchanged a few words with every patient. He was cheered by a large crowd as he stepped back into his auto to visit other townships. His route from Melfi took him through Rapolla, Barile and Rio Naro.

Undersecretary of Public Works Leoni this afternoon presided at an important meeting in Potenza of the prefects of the provinces of Avellino, Bari, Foggia and Potenza to co-ordinate all relief activities of the region.

Mussolini Leads Fight to Avert Famine and Plague

Rome, July 26 (INS)—Grimly determined inhabitants and relief workers of the earthquake devastated region in South Central Italy joined forces today in a superhuman battle against starvation and disease.

Premier Benito Mussolini's ministry made all efforts to foster a new courage where it is needed most. It was announced that the government had contributed $1,300,000 for initial relief work, and the Bank of Italy $26,000.

On the heels of this followed reports that the government already had reached a decision to push wholesale reconstruction of the twisted area as well as that of the cyclone-stricken Piave Valley with even greater speed than the sweeping reconstruction program which followed the war.

It was reported also that all earthquake sufferers would be declared exempt from taxation for the next ten years, or at least from taxes on tangible property.

Monsignor Sperio Chapelle, special envoy of Pope Pius XI, arrived in the earthquake area today and placed the full resources of the Church at the command of the relief workers. He is under instructions to make an exhaustive report to the Pontiff on the loss of life and property damage

Survivors Terrorized by Eight New Quakes

Naples, July 26 (AP)—The people in the stricken zone still dazed were alarmed today by the continuance of earth shocks, fearful that heavier ones might follow.

In the last two days there have been eight new quakes, although they did no severe damage in comparison with the mid-week tremors.

Five new shocks were felt yesterday in the same southern region stricken Wednesday. Two occurred in the morning and three in the afternoon.

LONDON CHEERS MARION DAVIES

(Universal Service Special Cable)

London, July 26—One of the season's special features was the premiere of Marion Davies' latest movie picture, "The Gay Nineties," known in America as "The Floradora Girl" at the Empire Theater last night.

Before a crowded, distinguished and constantly applauding audience, Miss Davies made a personal appearance. In a brief speech she said she would carry back to Hollywood with her warmest memories of the reception given by her English friends.

Prior to the performance, Miss Davies was the guest of Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten.

Among the prominent persons in the audience were Lady Ravensdale, the Countess of Oxford and Asquith, Lady Colefax, H. G. Wells, Edward Noblock, Irene Castle, Anthony Asquith and Elinor Glyn.

At the conclusion of the performance a private reception was given in honor of Miss Davies at the West End Hotel.

SUIT LOOMS IN BATTLE OVER 2 BABIES

Nobody Wants the One Watkins Has, and Even Science Cannot Solve Parentage

Chicago, July 26 (AP)—The tiny bundle of a boy at the William Watkins' home has become, for the time being, the baby nobody wants.

The Watkins do not want him, nor do the Charles Bambergers all the parents want the baby boy the Bambergers have.

The baby nobody wants was born in the Englewood Hospital 38 days ago, either son of the Watkins or the Bambergers. He and the other baby boy left the hospital the same day—the former for the Watkins' home, the other for the Bambergers' home. Everyone was happy.

Then Daddy Watkins found a tab marked 'Bamberger' on the back of the baby. A tab marked "Watkins" was found on the baby at the Bamberger home. Confusion, anxiety and heart twists followed. The Watkins wanted the baby at the Bamberger home, the Bambergers wanted him, too, and they kept him.

Thursday, seven scientists and medical men, summoned by R. Arnold H. Kegel, health commissioner, agreed, with one exception, that the babies should be switched—the one at the Watkins home going to the Bambergers, and vice versa. But the Bambergers refused and disappeared.

Then came an announcement that at a midnight conference at the Keystone hospital, the parents decided to keep the babies they had. Another group of physicians and hospital authorities, meeting with the parents and Dr. Kegel, had decided the tabs not the babies, had been switched.

Now, the Watkinses have repudiated the announcement and retained a lawyer to fight the case out in court.

GARRETT TAUNT ON PIGEON

First it was a note in a bottle off City Point, then it was a note in a bottle on Lake Quinsigamond at Worcester, and now—ho, hum—it's a note on a carrier pigeon.

Oliver B. Garrett, a fugitive for 34 days, is sending carrier pigeons with taunting notes to the Boston police if one can catch the signatures on a note attached to a bird which fluttered down on the Granary Burying Ground on Tremont st., yesterday.

One just naturally doesn't however.

Traffic Officer Joseph Giovannucci captured the bird and the message. The bird got away but the message said:

"Try-and-get-me. Garrett. Plymouth."

Police headquarters was notified and on Commissioner Hultman's order that no tip or clue be overlooked, the search again headed Plymouthward.

Among the resolutions adopted were a number which were expected to met with opposition.

One recommended that the Legislature prohibit the opening of stores on Armistice Day.

A fight on the Baby Veterans Act which was expected, failed when the convention refused to discuss the question.

The resolution had been previously voted down by the resolutions committee.

Crowds flocked into this beautiful little college town in the heart of the Berkshires today to witness the parade, the outstanding semi-military event of years in this vicinity.

San Francisco, July 26 (INS)—When the State Supreme Court hearing on the new pardon application of Warren K. Billings opens Tuesday the most elaborate precautions ever taken to prevent possible interruption of such proceedings will be enforced.

A special squad of state police headed by Eugene Biscailuz, chief of the state traffic patrol, will form a cordon about the courtroom doors in the city building and other guards will be stationed within the chambers.

Letters from fanatics to the court, as well as applications for admission from hundreds of persons who cannot be accommodated in the 100 seats available, have made this step necessary, it was revealed today by Chief Justice William H. Waste.

Meanwhile a new witness bobbed up in Cleveland with a story involving three unnamed Mexicans in the Preparedness Day bomb outrage. He is Adam Krumese, a caretaker on the estate of an Ohio millionaire. Little credence was given his story by defense attorneys here, and the state Supreme Court will not invite him to testify at the present hearing.

NAB EX-MAYOR AT WIFE'S GRAVE

life-long friend of Spaulding learned from a relative that Mrs. Spaulding had died in New York. She told Mr. Rowe and suggested that the woman's body might be brought back to Manchester for burial.

Manchester officials communicated with Sheriff Spinney at Portsmouth, who held the warrant for Spaulding's arrest and it was forwarded to New York. And Spaulding came back with the body of his wife.

VANISHED IN 1927.

Police displayed compassion, for, although the former mayor was under arrest from the moment he arrived here, he was not aware of it until his duty to the memory of his wife had been discharged.

Spaulding is 55. His wife was a Manchester girl, daughter of excellent family. Life for them together led along the highroad for many years. He held the assistant postmastership, then, in 1918, was elected mayor. He had an excellent law practice.

But the highroad sloped into the valley in 1927, when a shortage was discovered in the estate of which he was executor. Manchester was no longer a friendly city and Spaulding and his wife disappeared.

FLED TO NEW YORK

Something of the three years that followed in their lives was conveyed to the police by Spaulding after his arrest. They had gone to New York. There he had been admitted to the bar and there he had practised law, but the spectre of the old New Hampshire charge and the knowledge of the search for him throughout the East lay always over their heads.

Mrs. Spaulding died suddenly, and the former mayor, communicating with her family here, determined to accompany the body home, despite the probability of arrest.

New York, July 26—Kathryn Ray, Broadway stage beauty, who is co-defendant in a $200,000 suit brought against her by an ex-maid, lost the first round in the legal battle when the courts decided yesterday that the maid will not have to name her witnesses. Anna Snowden, the colored maid who is suing the stage star, charges that while Miss Ray was entertaining her platonic friend Macoco de Alegra, they were swapping blows in a Paris hotel last year. She sent a few her way for good measure. Miss Ray characterized the suit as a "frameup and persecution attempt at blackmail and extortion." Both defendants declared that they had never punched the maid in the nose during any of their many "love battles."

Pope Considers Purchasing Yacht

Vatican City, July 26—Rumors have been circulating persistently that His Holiness, Pope Pius, is seriously contemplating the purchase of a small ocean-going vessel for the yacht type. This ship it is said would be of great value in transportation of papal nuncios to various countries. The cruising radius of the craft would be limited, by the diplomatic factors, it is pointed out, to certain countries, including the United States, have not, as yet, recognized the independent status of the Vatican City. It is doubtful just what status the papal ship would have in these ports.

FITZGERALD AND DONAHUE SPLIT ON EVE OF 'HARMONY PARLEY'

CHAIRMAN IS FOR PICKING TICKET

Former Mayor, Who Fathered Conference Plan, Says Course Would Violate Primary Law

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Hope of harmony at the Democratic conference scheduled for Worcester Monday received a setback today with former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and Chairman Frank J. Donahue of the state committee at loggerheads.

Chairman Donahue declared emphatically that the plan to select a party ticket at the conference would go through as originally suggested by Fitzgerald.

To this the former mayor replied that such a plan would be a violation of the law and he did not believe he would permit his name to be voted on for any office under such conditions.

Fitzgerald's latest suggestion that the conference be confined to a discussion of ways and means to strengthen the organization was characterized by Donahue as "blah."

FITZGERALD CITES LAW.

"To call busy men from all parts of the Commonwealth to listen to a lot of blah would be to insult them," said Donahue.

His intimated further he will take the floor and deliver a sizzling speech directed at the lack of harmony in party ranks.

"I don't imagine they will vote," said former Mayor Fitzgerald. "The law says there shall be no party convention to pick candidates. I'm much against putting myself in such a situation."

Fitzgerald intimated there is much objection among the rank and file of the party to the conference picking candidates because of the violation of the State primary law it would entail.

"The situation has changed considerably," he added, "and the atmosphere is now clearing."

WON'T DISCUSS PLAN.

He said he would go to Worcester with a strong Boston delegation behind him in his fight for the gubernatorial nomination. He believes, he said, that the leaders can bring about harmony without taking a vote.

The former mayor refused to discuss his original suggestion for a conference to pick a slate, or the later statement calling for a discussion of ways and means.

Chairman Donahue was far from reticent on either subject. He said:

"If former Mayor Fitzgerald's statement is to be interpreted to the effect that the conference at Worcester Monday should not go on record as to candidates, then I am in total disagreement with him. It was Mr. Fitzgerald who suggested the conference for the purpose of agreeing on a ticket. To say now, as he is quoted as saying, that such a conference should be confined to a discussion of ways and means of strengthening the organization seems to me utterly absurd.

SAYS WALSH FAVORS

"To call busy men from all parts of the Commonwealth to listen to a lot of 'blah' would be to insult the [illegible] who have been invited expect to take up the question of candidacies and I believe they will.

"Senator Walsh, I know, sees no objection to such a representative gathering of Democrats rendering their considered judgment as to who would make up the strongest ticket. He will say so Monday. Senator Walsh does not personally desire to enter into a discussion of candidates.

"His letter to Mr. Fitzgerald was written more than 10 days ago, in which the former mayor suggested that Senator Walsh, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mayor Curley, Mr Ely, Mrs. Colin MacDonald, Vincent Brogna, myself and perhaps a few others, sit down in conference.

"Senator Walsh was and is opposed to any such conference as that taking action.

OTHER CANDIDATES IN LINE.

"Personally I am going through with the conference for the purpose originally suggested by Mr Fitzgerald. He has said repeatedly that he will abide by the decision of the conference. I do not think he is going to 'run out' on that pledge.

"Mr. Ely believes the conference should decide on a ticket and says he will abide by its decision.

"Mr. Coolidge has made no public declaration, but he has told me I could say he will abide by the conference's decision. Why all the talk about abiding by the decision of the conference if it is going to do nothing but talk?

"I believe the conferees should arrive at a decision on the strongest ticket that can be presented and should go out and work for that ticket. I hope they will do so. It is up to the conference."

Asks Referendum in Government Change

Petitions are in circulation in Everett asking that the proposal to change the form of city government be submitted to the voters and that the city adopt Plan B, which would materially reduce the membership of the legislative body.

These petitions will require approximately 1800 signatures.

Instead of the board of aldermen of seven members and a council of 18 members which now exist, the new plan calls for one body of 11 members. Supporters claim that it will save $5400 in salaries.

Essex Tennis Play Draws Society

Fashionable Gowns Are Feature of Gallery at Annual Tournament

SEVERAL HUNDRED spectators witnessed the ladies' annual tennis tournament at the Essex County Club yesterday. The gallery for the week has not been as large as last year, perhaps due to inclement weather and partly, no doubt, because Mrs. Helen Wills Moody failed to appear, but what it lacked in numbers it made up for in interest and social prominence.

ANOTHER OBSERVATION might also be made, that the women were noticeably well-dressed, their smart sports costumes and summer chiffons contributing much to the atmosphere of the occasion. Dark blue Boston was conspicuous by her absence and the whites, light blue, pinks and yellows seemed to rejoice. The young buds looked particularly pretty in their light frocks, among these Miss Nancy Whitman in yellow and brown ensemble, Alice and Kitty Eustace in pale blue and white, Rosilla Hornblower in white with blue coat, Ann Dick charmingly fashioned in red print, and Berta Bartlett also brilliant in red and white.

THE FRENCH BEIGE SILK costume worn by Mrs. Sam Warren was effectively set off by the large black hat of the mode, and Miss Susan Sturgis was smartly dressed in black and white. Mrs. Daniel Simonds, 2d, in Patou pink, and her friend, Mrs. R. C. Storey, in light blue, were noticeably well dressed. Miss Marjorie Morrill, who played such marvelous tennis in the morning, winning from Miss Gladman in the singles, wore a most attractive green tennis costume with green net bandeau—she was easily the most effective player of the day

Germany Popular With Visitors to Europe This Year

EVERYONE WHO IS GOING to Europe this year seems to have included Germany in his itinerary, in some cases the greater part of the tour being devoted to that country. Bad Nauheim is one of the most wonderful places to rest in Europe. At the Joachim Grand Hotel were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter of Chicago and Beverly Farms; at the Atlantic Hotel in Hamburg, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dudley McKenzie are registered for the opening of the splendid new golf course

STAYING AT THE HOTEL Winsor in Rome recently were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nelson Cartwright and among the guests at the Hotel de la Ville at Milan was Mr. John Parkinson of Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Proctor were at Carlsbad for the racing season and Mrs. Allen Curtis and her daughter, Miss Marjorie Curtis were recent arrivals at the Hotel de l'Europe in Aix-les-Bains.

MRS. ROBERT M. TAPPAN of Ivy Brook, Needham, is chairman of the women's committee of the Children's Island Sanitarium, which is located on Lowell Island, Marblehead harbor. This committee co-operates with the doctors and nurses in helping about a hundred boys and girls regain their health. The women's committee in its entirety consists of Mrs. Robert M. Tappan, chairman; Mrs. William T. Aldrich, Mrs. Lloyd T. Brown, Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Mrs. Richard Curtis, Mrs. Leslie B. Cutler, Miss Emily Davis, Mrs. Carl Dreyfus, Miss Edith Fabens, Mrs. George F. Gardner, Jr., Mrs. Richard Hartz, Miss Lorraine Leeson, Mrs. Charles A. Rheault, Mrs. William D. Eastern Star Delegates Meet

Tercentenary "Open House" Held at Hotel Bellevue Attended by Hundreds

By NANCY BREWSTER

Eastern Star members and officers from all over the State met at the Hotel Bellevue to exchange greetings and hospitality at the Tercentenary "open house" gathering of the Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star of Massachusetts.

Headed by Mrs. Gladys N. Thorndike of Marblehead, a general committee supervised the arrangements, several of whom acted as hostesses to the visiting grand matrons and grand marshals.

The order will continue to maintain "open house" headquarters at the Bellevue until October 1, with a hostess on hand to welcome any visiting Eastern Star member from any part of the country in the city for celebration activities.

SPECIAL GUESTS

Assisting Mrs. Thorndike were Mrs. Annie L. Woodman, Melrose, past grand matron; Mrs. Marjorie Chisholm, Everett, past grand matron; Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Florence Batsch, Brookline, past matron, and Mrs. Alice Abbott, Somerville, past matron. Hostesses were Mrs. Doris Wylie, Everett, and Mrs. Mabel Edna McLean, West Medford.

ALL CHAPTERS REPRESENTED

Among those who attended the festivities were numerous deputy grand matrons, some of whom were Mrs. Abbie B. Foster, Springfield; Mrs. Julia W. Pomeroy, Lalton, Mrs. Jessie L. Stevens, Methuen; Mrs. Evelyn N. Fairchild, Lexington; Mrs. Hattie G. Viall, Rehoboth; deputy grand marshals, Mrs Martha R. Burch, Springfield, and Mrs. Annie R. Goff, Rehoboth.

Others of the various chapters included Mrs. Bessie R. Page, Arlington; Mrs. Emma Childs, Springfield; Mrs. Bertha Harrison, Marblehead; Mrs. Grace Tweedy, Chelmsford; Mrs. Flora H. Durfee, Lowell; Mrs. Maria M. Goff, Lowell; Mrs. Olive Ballentine, Everett; Mrs. Estelle Kennell and her daughter, Irene, Everett; Mrs. Nellie O. Reid, Everett; Mrs. Annie Henderson, West Roxbury; Mrs. Hazel Zucker, Medford; Mrs. Pauline Curry, Brookline; Mrs. Elizabeth Batsch, Brookline; Mrs. Ruth Lincoln, Wollaston; Mrs. Mabel Perry, Woburn, and Mrs. Myrtle Packard, Woburn.

Jewish Women's College Club Will Celebrate in Fall

The Jewish Women's College Club is now planning for the decennial celebration, which is to take place some time in the fall. At a summer executive session of the group, held at the home of the president, Miss Flora Levin of Roxbury, tentative plans were discussed and formulated, sufficiently broad in scope as to include all women graduates of a degree granting college, organized by the Massachusetts board of education.

Miss Sadie Goren of Roxbury is chairman of membership and applications for membership should be made through her.

The celebration is to take the form of a reception to new and old members and will officially open the season for the club

Officers of the club, besides Miss Levin, are: Dr. Clara Leitman, Tufts Medical, vice-president; Rose Stolow Hurvitz, Radcliffe, recording secretary; Gertrude Wolf, Radcliffe, corresponding secretary; Dr. Sue Friedman, Tufts Medical, treasurer; Miriam Goldman, Jackson, auditor; Gertrude Eisenberg Brown, chairman of program; Meta Hallpern Morrison, Barnard, chairman of scholarship; Sadie Goren, Radcliffe, chairman of membership; Leah Malkiel, Radcliffe, chairman of publicity, and Anne Levenson, Simmons, member-at-large.

Mrs. Bevens Urges Caution in Forming Junior Clubs Now

Unless there is a real need in the community, junior clubs should not be forced into existence, Mrs. Edwin Bevens, chairman of junior membership in the General Federation, advises local junior membership chairmen

There should first be a demand for a junior group in the senior club or among the young women themselves before organization is attempted, she points out.

She says further:

"Within the last year there has been a steady stabilization of junior clubs. It is worthy of note that the mortality rate among clubs hastily organized has been great. Such clubs have invariably slipped back into oblivion; but clubs formed with a purpose and in response to a community need, have apparently steadied down to a long-time fulfillment of the purpose for which they came together.

"More than 25 per cent of the states report junior state conference, sectional conference, state councils, junior city federations, while fully 40 pe. cent of the states featured junior club-women on their State Federation programs.

Mrs. Joseph Leiveld is the junior chairman of the Massachusetts States Federation. The powerful Rockland junior group is of her ingenuity and leadership.

Educational and Industrial Union Is 53 Years Old

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union, founded 53 years ago as an experiment by women in economic and social education, has indeed proved its worth. Founded for the purpose of "increasing membership among women, in order to promote the best practical methods of securing their educational, industrial and social advancement," the union last year served more than 25,000 women in some capacity in the various departments sponsored by the organization.

The figure does not include the 18,000 school children whose menus and diets are guided by the union in the service rendered them during the school year.

Mrs. Eva Whiting White, prominent Boston social worker, and former head of the Elizabeth Peabody House, is now president of the union.

Every Smart Dress Has Own Jacket

By ANN ARDEN

Model from C. F. Hovey Co.

(ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

EVERYONE IS wearing them—these pleasing, convenient jacket frocks. They make the most informal sports dress look all dressed up to go places by the simple act of slipping on the jacket.

* * *

AND THEY prove a new point in the mode—the dress often is definitely related to the jacket by binding, stitching or trimming in the color of the jacket itself.

* * *

A SLEEVELESS silk dress is piped in the color of the cape jacket. The dress itself is simple enough for an active game of tennis—the jacket turns it into a spectator sports costume.

* * *

THE JACKET is smarter than ever, in this feminine mode Jackets, too, are feminine. Many are very individual, so that they are practical for more formal occasions than sports.

* * *

* * *

A NARROW pleated frill of the crepe finishes the edge. The little jacket of the silk is in powder blue, with cut-away fronts, cross-over belt, tiny revers, and a short cape over each shoulder. The draped felt beret is also in powder blue, its drapery caught by felt bow at back, a band of grosgrain ribbon softening the edge, and crossing at center front.

The smart bag is reversible—powder blue linen one side, leather on the other. A blue composition necklace and bracelet are worn; white washable gloves; and the pumps are the smart brown and white composition.

* * *

NOT WITHOUT its little jackets would a sports wardrobe be complete! We judge the favor for them by their numbers on every sporting field. Worn for warmth? Perhaps they are—as much as any high fashion ever is chosen on a practical virtue like that. Worn for trim effect, color and flattery they surely are

* * *

EVERYONE KNOWS how smart opera pumps are—and operas in linen accomplish the most sensible and charming of summer fashions

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL

(Universal Service Special Cable)

Paris, July 25—"The engagement of the Princess Amadée Broglie to Don Luis De Bourbon is nobody's business but her own. Justice has not the right to interfere with the love of a princess, who can marry whom she pleases."

That was the plea of Henri Torres, attorney for the 73-year-old Princess De Broglie, who appeared for her in court yesterday to defend her against an alleged attempt by the Duke De Brissac, her nephew, to tie up the Princess' estate and prevent the marriage.

The princess did not appear in court, although three allenists were present to testify to her sanity, which is also questioned by the Duke. The Princess and Don Luis were to have been married last Saturday in San Remo, Italy, where Don Luis, once engaged to Mrs. Mabelle Gilman Corey, of Pittsburgh, is now residing because the government refuses him permission to enter France.

Don Luis, who is 42, is the son of the Infanta Eulalie of Spain, who, like the members of the princess' family, is opposed to the match.

The princess, it was charged, has been spending to freely of the $2,000,000 estate which nets her a yearly income of about $32,000. She contended, through M. Torres, that most of the spending has been done for her children, one of whom, Prince Jacques, is now seeking an annulment of his second marriage.

THE DANIEL GREEN, HOMESTEAD, STONEHAM

On the road by the standpipe, in Stoneham, is a little yellow house in which live the descendants of Daniel Green. The street bears their name and Green st. may also be found in Woburn and other towns of that territory, probably in honor of the same family.

The house is low, with fields planted nearby, not crowded by neighbors.

BUILT IN 1700

Thomas Millard built the house about 1700. In those days, little record was kept and this house must have been on the outskirts of the settlement. The history of Millard is incomplete, and a period elapses until the Greens take possession. Daniel Green was the first one of the line to take property rights and thereafter until the present name Daniel Green is carried on. The present member is Daniel Oaks Green

Daniel at the time of the Revolution fought as a minute man at Lexington and Concord. He was ploughing in the early morn, so the story goes, when the alarm was sounded. His yoke of oxen were left standing in the plough, while he unhitched the horse in front, rode to the barn, snatched a pitchfork for weapon and went to Woburn to join his company

INVENTED BUFFER

A later Daniel invented the buffing machine for shoes which is now used, in principle, in all the great shoe factories. He was noted for an unusual fine finish to his work and upon being asked the secret, he demonstrated the sanding machine he had made. The device was immediately adopted by nearby shoe factories and soon became widespread in its use

He sewed and fashioned shoes by hand, during the summers. Winters saw him traveling through Virginia selling the articles in barrels.

The home is surrounded by a farm which was of large proportions containing a cider mill, horse powered. A captain turned the grinder. A shoe shop was later added to the other activities of the farm

Fiddling was an art which one of the Daniels enjoyed, much to the benefit of his townsmen, for often he would officiate at the square dances and Virginia reels held in neighbors' barns.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor, Boston American:

Boston is being ruled today by men who are over 40 years. Few young men hold foremost positions either in politics or literature or in business.

The fact is that the young man who wants to reach a place of influence and power must strive harder than ever. He must watch opportunity. He must economize time. He must concentrate effort and keep his courage up.

He must get used to this policy that takes place in Boston, if as a young man he falls down, he gets H——. If he does well he gets that deadly silence that hangs as crape around him. He has to grin and bear it.

If Boston had more young men in official positions, there would not be so much of this sluggishness in unemployment.

Sees Dry Leaders in Death Struggle

Editor Boston American

The editorial writer of your paper deserves much credit for his sane and thorough American stand on the prohibition question. The time has come when fanaticism must be rebuked. The recent dry rallies, mass meetings, the immediate replies of male and female prohibitionists to the commonsense utterances of congressmen in regard to the utter failure of the Noble Experiment—are the death struggles of a dying monster. The Boston Evening American has always championed good policies. The people are with you in the fight against the prohibition monster. J. COLLINS.

Mayor Curley's Stand Puzzles This Reader

Editor Boston American:

Mayor Curley's defense of President Hoover has brought him commendation from some of Boston's blue-bloods who rejoice that the mayor has asked the people to uphold Hoover's policies.

The same people were also behind the successful movement to destroy the American navy Strange position for the mayor to take. W. F. MASON.

Upholds Curley's Stand With President

Editor Boston American:

In reply to a reader who signs himself as "One Not Deluded," I wish to say that I heartily congratulate Mayor Curley on his policy of stand by the President. That is a sensible and far-sighted policy. Mayor Curley realizes that this is no time for criticism but rather action to the fullest co-operation.

When "One Not Deluded" has arrived at the conclusion that Mayor Curley and Calvin Coolidge are wrong by supporting the President, and that the President is responsible for any stock market crashes that have occurred in the past, then I firmly believe that the conclusion drawn is one which needs more basic weighting in fact, the conclusion is a complete fallacy.

No single individual in this country is responsible for crashes. They are due to the great herd of men who control the stock market.

"One Not Deluded" must also remember that President Hoover is responsible for the great fight he put up in having the flexible provision, which alone makes the tariff not as bad as it seems. We must remember that after the stock market crash, President Hoover took the advice of the Hearst newspapers and called for a conference of business leaders. One of the direct results was the continuous work that has been taking place among the public works throughout the country

To Mayor Curley is due unlimited credit for his stand and like attitude in supporting President Hoover in these times. That is why Mayor Curley and President Hoover are such broad-minded men—men who are leaders because they stick to the end no matter how hard the sailing is.

Relieves Jay Drivers Deserve Some Blame

Editor Boston American:

So much is said in the papers now about jay walkers. Why not give some sass to the jay drivers?

They deserve it right here in Boston. I alighted from an electric car from the front door and just as soon as I left the step of that car, one of these jay drivers spun past leaving me standing on the road and other jay drivers followed him.

One of these jay drivers looked up on me and just smiled with that sort of a look; "Why in the dickens did you get in my way?"

Says Real Need for New Subway Station

Editor Boston American:

It is greatly to the credit of the Boston Evening American that it has on several occasions agitated on "El" station at the corner of Cambridge and Charles sts. It was championed in a letter two months ago appearing in your paper. There is no valid reason against it except the expense. When years ago the Arlington st. station was called for, there was great hubbub about it, till the merchants came into the breach and that settled it. It has since then justified its existence.

Why is an "El" station needed at Cambridge and Charles sts? First of all to accommodate the masses who have to visit the Massachusetts General Hospital, the Eye and Ear Infirmary and other institutions near by. These calls are made daily. Secondly, the bus does not meet the requirements. Why not give the many visitors to the hospitals some relief from their anxious thoughts as they go upon these errands of mercy to the afflicted and dying? Why harrass them with inconveniences of transportation?

Did Gov. Allen really understand conditions in getting to these hospitals, when some time ago he opposed this measure?

Will he just try the bus for argument sake? Have mercy upon those who come from far in this state and have difficulty in reaching that locality. Why should not the common people be considered in this movement?

HENRY T. JOSLING.

Daisies Keep Flies on the Move Out of Homes

Editor Boston American:

You had something to say in your letter column about different colors in rooms, driving flies out of them. Place a few bouquets of daisies in the room daily and you will find the colony of flies gone in that room. Flies do not like the odor of daisies.

R. N. MOSELEY.

Cape Cod Prepares for War on Mosquito

Editor Boston American:

Prepare for war on Cape Cod. It starts August 2. Battalions are being formed all along the cape. Every mosquito will be lambasted from that date to the final barrage down at Provincetown.

This will cost the State of Massachusetts the neat sum of $200,000.

Join the army of insurgents. Get swatter ready. Those who have been bitten at North Eastham will have courage enough given them to be whacking all down the cape to the tip end.

WANT OWENS KEPT IN TOWN

Fifty business men with offices in Essex st. and vicinity, today presented a petition to Police Commr. Eugene C. Hultman requesting that Patrolman Walter Owens transferred from Division 4 in the recent shakeup, be retained on the route he has covered for the last ten years.

The petition calls attention to the fact that Owens had become thoroughly familiar with conditions on his route and had particular knowledge of the labor situation in the manufacturing area, because of many troublesome strikes.

Saul Beale, one of the Essex st. signers of the petition said it includes a tribute to the good judgment and efficient service of Patrolman Owens.

Owens' home is in West Roxbury and he was assigned to that district in the drastic reorganization that followed the exposure of liquor conditions in Division 4.

The Weather

For Boston and vicinity—Fair tonight; Sunday partly cloudy, possibly followed by thunder storms in afternoon or night; light variable winds mostly southerly.

For Southern New England—Partly cloudy tonight and Sunday; local showers Sunday; slightly warmer tonight except on the southeast coast; moderate winds, mostly south and southwest.

For Northern New England—Partly cloudy weather with local thunder showers late tonight and Sunday; somewhat warmer except on the Maine coast tonight, slightly cooler in north, north Sunday, gentle to moderate south and southwest winds.

For Eastern New York—Partly cloudy weather with local thunder showers in north and central portions late tonight or Sunday and probably in extreme portion Sunday; somewhat warmer in the interior tonight, slightly cooler in north and central portions Sunday; moderate winds, mostly south and southwest.

OCEAN FORECAST

Steamers departing today for European ports will have gentle to moderate winds mostly south and southwest and generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

Two years ago he joined Sears, Roebuck & Co. in charge of the retail store at Boston.

YOUTHS TO SEE EUROPE FREE

An opportunity to earn a European tour or a college scholarship is offered to Boston boys and girls between 12 and 19 in the Sparton scholarship contest being sponsored locally by Edwin C. Lewis, Inc., 121 Federal st.

The first youngster to take advantage of the unusual offer made by W. S. Sparks, president of the Sparks-Withington Co. was Max Kaplan of 59 Heard st., Chelsea whose entry was received yesterday.

Sparks was prompted to make the offer in order to help young people to obtain the benefit of education and travel more easily than was the case in his own earlier years. Particulars of the contest are being given at the office of the Edwin C. Lewis Co.

Use Radio in Hunt for Mother of Dying Boy

Portland, Me., July 26—Radio broadcasting stations throughout New England and New York were appealed to today by Portland police in hope of locating Mrs. Seth P. M. Carr of Portland, Me., whose son, Walter Kearney, 16, is dying, in the Maine General hospital.

Kearney is at the hospital suffering from a broken back and neck which he received when he dove into shallow water at Willard Beach. The boy has been pleading with the doctors and nurses to find his mother before he died. He told hospital officials that his mother is motoring through New York State.

LODGING THEFT SUSPECT HELD

Through the keenness of Sergt. Richard J. Linehan of Cambridge, a suspect in the recent series of lodging-house robberies in Cambridge, Boston and Revere was arrested today.

Seated in headquarters near Central sq., Sergt. Linehan saw through a window a man carrying a black suitcase, a feature of the description of the much-sought burglar.

Linehan caught the man in a store. He gave his name as Daniel Kivas, 28, of Dover st., Boston.

According to the police, Kivas was identified by one of the lodging-house proprietors as a man who rented a room and disappeared after lodgers had been robbed.

In Kivas' possession, police say, were 15 to 20 pawn tickets and bonds, said to be the property of Joseph Erickson of 203 Harvard st., Cambridge. Several charges of larceny were laced against Kivas.

Mrs. Catherine Uring of 13 Bizzow st. told police two men rented a room from her last night, and left. She said the room of Walter Lee was entered and clothing and money taken.

Dorchester and Revere police have received similar complaints.

Last Rites Held for Capt. Walsh

Funeral services for Capt. Thomas Walsh, known to thousands of visitors to Nantasket, were held at St. Paul's Church at Hingham today with a high mass of requiem. Capt. Walsh died at Cohasset hospital after a short illness. He was in his 79th year. During the latter years of his life he had piloted various excursion vessels about Nantasket and until recently was in charge of the schooner Nancy, stranded on Nantasket beach.

Arrest Air Chief in Killing of Five

Mexico City, July 26 (AP)—Col. Alfredo Lezama, commander of the aerial regiment, two planes of which collided in the air yesterday and caused five deaths, was arrested today by orders of the army high staff pending an investigation. Four of the victims were aviators, two from each plane. The fifth was a peon playing handball on a court below.

4 STILL FLYING FOR RECORD

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 26 (AP)—Well into their second hundred hours aloft, the crew of the "Red" Stinson monoplane churned the air above Long Island today in its assault on the 554 hour endurance record of the Hunter brothers.

This afternoon the plane had spent approximately 238 hours in the air. It is manned by Louis Reichers and Robert Black.

Lambert Field, St. Louis, July 26 (NEA)—Sputtering a stiff gale which blew up late yesterday, the "Greater St. Louis," endurance plane piloted by Dale "Red" Jackson and Forrest O'Brine, moved serenely into the sixth day of its communion with the clouds today.

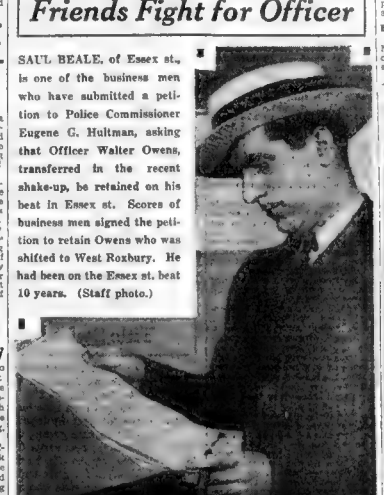
SAUL BEALE, of Essex st., is one of the business men who have submitted a petition to Police Commissioner Eugene G. Hultman, asking that Officer Walter Owens, transferred in the recent shake-up, be retained on his beat in Essex st. Scores of business men signed the petition to retain Owens who was shifted to West Roxbury. He had been on the Essex st. beat 10 years. (Staff photo.)



Aged Couple Lose All in Stock Frauds

ceiving any dividends they became worried. They appealed to one of the stock salesmen. They told him all the money they had left in the world was $300.

"Instead of suffering a pang of conscience he even succeeded in inducing the couple to invest that last $300. After that no further word was heard from the salesmen.

"Today, if it were not for the aid of neighbors and charitable organizations, the old couple would be literally starving and homeless."

Preliminary investigation led to the discovery that stock in nearly a dozen questionable mining companies has been sold in the metropolitan area within the past two months.

Complaints to the Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau and to Sawyer, indicate that bogus stock salesmen seek out crippled winners of personal injury awards.

One man wrote that almost immediately after he received $10,000 for the loss of a leg in an accident, he was besieged by stock salesmen. Finally one rapid-fire stock peddler got $2,000 of his money in the notorious George Graham Rice's Idaho Copper scheme, for which Rice has since been convicted for using the mails to defraud.

HEARING MONDAY

But before the crippled man learned that this stock was valueless, he definitely contracted the investment habit. A total of $2,000 went into oil stocks. Financing corporations—which have failed to finance so far—took $3,500 more.

Whether or not all of his investments are worthless cannot yet be told. The Boston Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau is still investigating them.

The hearing into charges of misrepresentation by salesmen of stock of the Holland Far East Tea, Coffee and Cocoa corporation is scheduled to be resumed Monday at the State House.

Police Inspector John Mitchell has located several of the salesmen who could not be found when the investigation was opened a week ago.

F. B. Abell of South Lancaster, Mass., complained that salesmen declared 8 per cent was being paid on class A stock and that in fact the company had not only paid 8 per cent but in addition, had given a bonus of 2½ per cent.

PAID $1200

The same crew of salesmen sold Mrs. Mary S. Howe of South Manchester, Mass., $1200 worth of stock on the same representation.

E. A. George of East Brookfield, Mass., bit on the "pound of coffee and one share for $1 plan." He bought 25 more shares when the salesman told him it was "progressively going on the stock exchange."

Bertha D. Teague of Sanford, Me., said she invested in Holland stock after salesmen told her she could get her money back at any time.

Charles F. and Mrs. Lizzie B. Ings of Hazardville, Ct., wrote that they had purchased 2000 shares of Holland stock from three different salesmen, each of whom made various misrepresentations, they charge.

Among other complaints which Sawyer is investigating are those which charge misrepresentation received from Mr. and Mrs. Fred Horner, of Auburn, R. I.; B. L. Barker, of Pittsfield, Mass.; James A. Campbell, Greenfield, Mass.; Eleanor B. Lane, Fall River, Mass., and Theodore P. Kunca, Meriden, Conn.

Director John C. Hull, of the securities division of the Department of Public Utilities, expects by Monday to announce a decision in the complaints made against Lou K. Dichter, connected with a Washington st. brokerage. Four women residing in the metropolitan district charged that he had sold them $110,000 worth of stock in a mine company through misrepresentation.

Are You a Victim?

If you have been victimized by stock swindlers, the Boston Evening American, co-operating with Government, State and County officials, will be glad to advise you what is best to be done. Write to the Boston Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, giving all the circumstances. Such information will be held confidential.

NO . . . TER WHAT COACHES SAY, THESE GRIDMEN WORK HARD

FOR YEARS, college football players have spent their summers at hard labor to fit themselves for the fall campaigns. Now, several coaches say hard work is all wrong. Bud Gorman, B. C. player, is a drawtender, and intends to keep right on working until the season opens.

JOHN LAW, captain of Notre Dame last year, pushed a wheel-barrow all summer. and if hard work hurt him, he might have crippled all his opponents if he had loafed. Knute Rockne favors hard work for his players.

JOHNNY MARR, another B. C. player, puts in a long day with a building contractor. His coach, Joe McKenney, thinks this kind of work tends to make players muscle-bound and robs them of needed stamina for a long grid campaign. Anyway, whatever coaches think, some of them have provided the dreamy members of the squad with an excuse to loaf.

one go to give the tiring Brugnon the benefit of a 10-minute rest that followed completion of the set.

10,000 Spectators See French Team Score Win

[illegible] the French all but conceded the [illegible] the U. S. doubles [illegible] the courts today.

Close on the French rose considerably after today's contest. Tilden must beat Cochet tomorrow and Lott down Borotra in order to bring the cup back to the United States.

The French combination added [illegible] a fine start in the first set. Cochet, victor over George Lott in the [illegible] by [illegible] service and the Frenchmen broke through Van Ryn's delivery to lead 2-0 in games. Brugnon then added his own service to the win column and the count stood 3-0 for the French.

A punch tennis battle developed as Allison, serving strongly, won the first game for the United States team. Cochet faltered in his delivery and the young Americans broke through to make it 3-3 against them in games. Van Ryn captured his service and the count [illegible] games were played in nine minutes.

Once the score was tied at 3 3 Brugnonian rallied, attacked fiercely, and ran off the next three games to take the opening set 6—3.

In the last three games Cochet's smashing attack overwhelmed the American youngsters and the Frenchmen concentrated on Allison effectively. The Texan made many errors as the pace grew hot.

5 4 6 0 3 2 6 4 9 6—36
Allison-Van Ryn—
3 1 0 6 4 6 1 7 2—28

Allison and Van Ryn started well in the second set, winning the first two games, but the French captured Van Ryn's service in the third games and Brugnon, serving with fine speed and accuracy, won his delivery to even the scors in games at 2 all.

Allison Improves as Match Progresses

Allison, erratic in the first set improved as the match wore on and developed especially fine play. The Texan won his service but Cochet scored his own for the French and the score was tied again in games 3-all.

The games in the second set went to 5-all as the Americans concentrated on Brugnon with a lobbing attack.

Cochet and Brugnon won the second set 7-5 and led two sets to none.

Cochet dominated the court throughout the second set and the American youngsters could not [illegible] his smashing aim.

A second was the wonder player on the court. He was outplayed in every department of the game except service, on which he stood [illegible] Brugnon.

Cochet Brugnon.—
3 2 6 4 2 5 0 6 6 4 4—38
Allison-Van Ryn:—
5 4 4 1 4 3 2 4 2 0 1 0—32

The Americans raced into a 4—1 lead in the third set by breaking through Brugnon for the first time in the match in the fourth game. Then Allison, with two service aces, forged out the fifth game.

As expected the pace was beginning to tell on Brugnon and he appeared to weaken. He had been doing the bulk of the playing as the Americans continually shot the ball at him to keep it out of reach of Cochet's devastating shots.

Allison and Van Ryn won the third set 6—1 and trailed two sets to one.

Allison and Van Ryn suddenly came to life and played the tennis expected of them in the third set although there were strong suspicions among the 10,000 fans now filling the stadium that the Frenchman had noticed Brugnon tiring and decided to let the set go.

The 10-minute rest after the third set was expected to do Brugnon considerable good.

The crowd was in continual applause during the rest period, cheering every notable present. Rene Lacoste, former world's ranking No. 1, was discovered in an inconspicuous seat with his bride and was given an ovation, greater even than the applause for President Doumergue.

Cochet-Brugnon..3 2 6 4 1 8 3—31
Allison Van Ryn. 5 4 0 6 4 7 6—32

The Frenchmen played beautifully to win the first three games of the fourth set, Brugnon winning the first on his service, while Cochet broke up Allison's service with irretrievable return that left the Americans standing still. Cochet won his own delivery after deuce was called three times.

The Americans rallied to take two games and trail in the fourth set, 5—2.

Soccer Tilt for State Cup Tomorrow

The final match for the Soccer Charity Cup competition will be played tomorrow at Quincy.

A week ago the committees announced that the final game which has Fore River and Morgans of Worcester as the contestants, would go over until the opening of the new season.

The change of heart, however, has made it necessary for the clubs to renew training again and the teams will clash at Fore River field tomorrow afternoon.

Whaleboats Enter National Regatta

One of the most spirited events of the impending national regatta on the Charles river will be the whaleboat race among crews from the United States destroyers, J. J. Paulding, Overton and McFarland. The three destroyers are in the Navy Yard at present and their whaleboats have been practicing daily for a week.

Boston Evening American Sponsors Title Swim Meet for Women

A women's amateur swimming meet under the auspices of the Boston Evening American to be held in the Charles river basin on Saturday, August 23.

This meet has been sanctioned by the New England Association of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States.

There will be nine events, the New England A. A. U. one-mile championship; 880 yards freestyle, 220 yards backstroke, 220 yards breaststroke, 100 yards freestyle, 50 yards freestyle, 50 yards freestyle for girls under 14 years of age, 100 yards freestyle, novice, for girls who never won an event and a fancy diving contest from a 10-foot board.

Three prizes will be given in each event and eight prizes will be awarded in the titular one-mile swim.

TONY MANERO LEADS FIELD

Ancaster, Ont., July 26 (AP)—Tony Manero, Emeford N. Y. pro, a third-round score of 70 and a 54-hole total of 208, led the early field in the Canadian open golf championship today. He was followed by Charles Lacey, Philadelphia, who had a total count of 215 after a 74 in the third round.

Gridmen Should Loaf in Summer, Says Coach

By JOHN GILLOOLY

The unemployment situation in the pick and shovel industry, the ice business, hod-carrying and other branches of strenuous endeavor has a benefactor in Hennie Miller, football coach at Temple University.

Although this football tutor is not necessarily a sociologist nor an economist by trade he has unintentionally proved a philanthropist by a few weighteen words, viz:

With this utterance, a gridiron theory taken for granted and never questioned although it is of importance in producing championship football teams has been roundly shaken.

Since Red Grange zig-zagged his way down the striped field and crossed the line to undying gridiron fame college boys have taken to hard work. For Grange carried ice during the summer months and his worshippers followed his precedent. For a time there were enough ice men in the industry to outfit all the night clubs in New York and Chicago with the congealed cubes. And the ranks were recruited from astounding proportions by collegians.

Hod-carrying, contracting jobs of the rugged sort, pick and shovel work in dirty, cobbly streets and various other types of tedious toil ensued in rapid order once the god Grange had shown the way.

Many Local Gridmen Work as Laborers

Some of the best athletes in Greater Boston are today working in similar jobs. Dick Gentis of Penn is working with pick and shovel; Al Morelli of B. C., is an ironman; Bud Gorman of B. C. works as a bridge tender; Charley Pieculewicz of Fordham works in a shipping department; Jack Young of B. C. carries ice at Brant Rock; Johnny Marr works for a building contractor. There are half a hundred more who could be found at hard labor in the near vicinity.

The football players the nation over step aimlessly into these jobs and work willingly under the delusion that they will be in top condition when the football season rolls around.

But now it comes to light that they are wrong. Football players, from the consensus taken of football authorities in Greater Boston, should loaf. And it won't take much coaxing to get them to adopt that idea.

Light Work Best for Men, Says McKenney

Joe McKenney, coach of Boston College's football charges, summed up the general opinion of coaches, declaring that Miller was correct, although he didn't exactly think the word "loaf" qualified.

"Football players in the summer months should find some job in which they will get light exercise, have a good rest and take on a little weight," Joe expounded.

"I have had football players report to me in the fall, big, strong and in the pink of health.

"I worked with pick and shovel this summer, Joe, and I'm all ready to go."

"But I found it to be true, in four or five cases, that these boys were down too fine. They were muscle bound. Their vitality was sapped. When they had gone through the preliminary grass drill and scrimmages they were completely spent. And it took them midway through the season before they were quick, agile and loose enough to play fast, speedy football."

Lehman 2 Up on Ira Couch

Beverly Country Club, Chicago, July 26 (AP)—Johnny Lehman held a 2 up margin over Ira Couch at the quarter turn of their all-Chicago 36-hole final match for the Western amateur golf championship today. Lehman toured the first nine holes in 37, one over par, despite an intermittent rain. Couch scored a 38. The cards:

REVERE BOYS IN RACE TONIGHT

With two Revere boys in the race, one a favorite to be up with the leaders at the finish, the other making his debut with the better class of bike riders, the Revere cycle track tonight will offer an hour motor-paced race with six riders as the feature attraction of the weekly bike racing show.

In addition there also will be a ten-mile amateur motor-paced race and the usual amateur and professional sprint races.

Frankie Keenan of Revere is the favorite to win tonight's event even though such other sterling riders as Franco Georgetti, world's motor-paced champion; Al Letourneur the flying Frenchman; Charlie Jaeger, the European motor-paced champion and Lawrence Chapman who is competing against him.

The 24th rider in the race is Johnny Gallo, also of Revere, well known in that section as a contractor and a member of the Revere Post of the American Legion.

In the amateur race will be Al Korth of Revere, Rinno Laura of East Boston and Anthony Insana and Peter Calise of Providence.

Fuller Battles Pisano Monday

A good boxing attraction will be staged in the Mark Bradigan, Taverton, R. I., on Monday night when Sammy Fuller of the North End clashes with Augie Pisano of New York in a ten-round battle.

Pisano rules a slight favorite to defeat Fuller. He has whipped Bruce Flowers twice, Stanislaus Loukya and Billy Wallace.

The Italian youngster from the North End is confident of victory. He will step into the ring Monday night in good condition.

Old Colony Title Net Games Today

Five important affairs are scheduled for this afternoon in the Old Colony Tennis League series. The Arlington Heights Tennis Club will take on the West Medford tennis players on the Heights courts, the Boston Young Men's Christian Association will be entertained by the Sagamore Club. Winsor goes to Winchester, Winthrop to Belmont, and the Hull club clash this afternoon, Burr plays at Bellevue.

McNulty Club City Twi Title Winner

The McNulty Club defeated the Agawams at William Curtis grounds last night 6 to 1 to win the city twilight league championship. They will now play the winner of Dorchester league.

Two championships are listed to be decided next week, the New England Professional Golfers' Organization amateur-pro club pair tilt over the 36-hole route on Monday at the Worcester Country Club and the annual Massachusetts junior championship at Belmont Spring.

Naturally the two title events are the features for the coming week, but the Jaques Cup, which is limited to 10 and under players should draw the largest field in years, for The Country Club classic conflicts only with the junior championship.

The Wyantenuck Country Club will stage its annual medal and match play fourday tournament starting with a qualifying round on Wednesday and continuing with match play through Saturday.

Strong Teams in Amateur-Pro Tourney

There are some exceptionally strong teams entered in the amateur-pro championship. Jack Cayley and Leon Emerson will defend their title, but they must be right at the top of their games in order to out strokes such combinations as Jim Hendry and Harold Nute, Manchester, N. H.; Eddie Morgan and Wilfred Crossley, Norfolk, Willie Ogg and Eddie O'Brien, Worcester; Jack Shea and Bob Hutchins, Kenwood; Gene Anderson and Jimmie Gannon, Colonial; John Hernard and Eddie Murphy, Charles Rivers; Roy Brondson and John J. Fitzgerald, Oyster Harbors; Jack Gray and Fred G. Thayer, Wollaston; Johnny Gilhohn and Seth Bruce, Jr., New Bedford; George McLeod and Billy McPhail, Belmont Spring; Bud Clancy and Bruce Coffin, North Shore, and Jack Hackett and Marshall Forrest, Vesper.

Billy Donnelly, Woodland, faces the toughest assignment ever taken by a junior champion in defending his title at Belmont Spring Country Club. There are almost 200 aspirants for the junior title and only those in a goodly portion are fine golfers.

Gannon Likely to Capture Junior Title

With all due respect to the ability of Bill Donnelly and all of the other top-notch juniors, Jimmie Gannon, Colonial, appears to be the master to beat to win the coming championship. Jimmie Gannon, who is a former caddy champion, has played in only two tournaments this season, North Shore and the Tedesco four-ball. He won both events.

Gannon has played with Gene Anderson in amateur-pro events and the pros all rate him as one of the best youngsters they have ever seen. If he does not bring the tendency to hit with a shut face to Belmont, Jimmie Gannon has a most an even chance of taking the junior title to Colonial.

QUINN A REAL VET

I do not recall what year John Picus came in [illegible] must have been along about 1908. Thus he has been playing big league baseball upwards of 22 years with an extension [illegible] league career.

He originated in the hard coal region of Pennsylvania, and as a young fellow he was a real looking, rock-like chap, thick-limbed and powerful. He is all of that today. He [illegible] massive physique has enabled him to weather the storms of two decades of big league baseball.

John Picus was [illegible] ball pitcher. When [illegible] spit-balling was considered something of an art. There was a certain manner [illegible] delivering a baseball [illegible] baffling a classic accompaniment, but alas! two [illegible] put under the ban by the use of extraneous substances, such as [illegible] nails and mud, and what not, the baseball powers had to [illegible] fans against all that [illegible] of pitching.

Besides, the batters couldn't hit it. In those days the cry was for more hitting, just as today the cry is for less hitting. So the baseball powers said that no more spit balls are could be employed by the big league clubs, but to the end that the current spit-ballers might not be deprived of a livelihood, the legislation provided that these pitchers might go on using their damp delivery, as the baseball writers used to call it.

OLD JOHN STILL THERE

The baseball powers thought that this ruling would [illegible] spit balling entirely from the big leagues within a very few years, but they didn't reckon on the resistance to age of John Picus. He still goes on.

The sturdy Pennsylvanian played against Connie Mack's great club of 24 years ago, and lived to enjoy a share of the Athletics' World series spoil in this day.

On his showing this early date, John Picus may last another 20 years. Or forever. Those Pennsylvanians are very tough.

Girls' Nine to Play Men at Waltham

A baseball attraction that is expected to arouse widespread interest throughout Greater Boston will take place at Beebe Park Waltham, next Thursday evening, when the Waltham City Club will meet the New York Bloomer Girls, famous feminine team.

Hub Runner and Mate Lead Pack

Three Rivers, Que., July 26—Arne L. Soumimen, Chinese Billy Bush of Boston, the Finnish American team, led the pack of runners in the Peter Dawson 50-mile race from Stanne-de-la-Perade here yesterday. The Boston boy, aided by Suominen won the second lap of 32 miles in the time of 3 hours 3 minutes 46 seconds.

The runners trek to Joliette, a distance of 66 miles today, and finish on the Central baseball stadium Sunday afternoon.

Hodder Wins

Attleboro, July 26—Clyde H. Hodder of Brae Burn, former Harvard hockey star, had the best [illegible] score in the tournament of the Highland Country Club, under the auspices of the Massachusetts State Golf Association, which closed last evening.

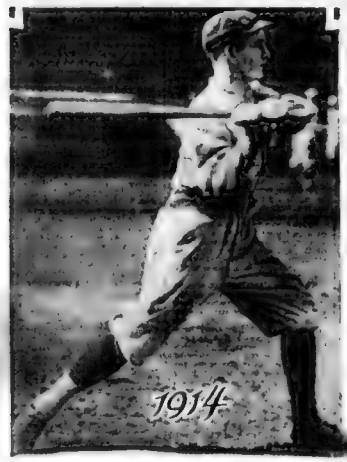
Cardinals Defeat Braves in 1st Game of Twin Bill

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

TIME HAS CHASED THE 'RABBIT' FOR 19 YEARS---BUT HAS YET FAILED TO CATCH HIM



DO YOU REMEMBER? Above is Walter Maranville, rookie shortstop of the Braves, whose brilliant playing earned him his nick-name, and helped the Braves to a pennant and world championship back in 1914 of glorious memory.

IN SERIOUS MOOD. Maranville is one of the brainiest players in the game. He plays with his head as well as his hands, and much of his success is due to the fact that he can out-think the enemy and outsmart opposing batsmen.

AS HE IS TODAY. The years seem to have stolen little of Maranville's marvelous energy. He is playing a better game today than he did when he first broke in. All New England will honor him today with a big celebration.

Outboard Runs Wild in Regatta

Camden, Me., July 26—An outboard motor boat that threw its driver, Dick Frost of Portland, several hundred yards from the finish as he was closing into first place and raced on driverless among dozens of boats before it upset, was the most thrilling feature of the races at the second annual Camden Yacht Club regatta held yesterday.

The craft hit a buoy rounding a turn and Frost was thrown out. The boat continued on for a quarter of a mile. It finally erased the bow of a yacht and upset.

DUCE ASKED TO AID CARNERA

Chicago July 26 (INS)—Promoter Mique Malloy has carried the problem of Primo Carnera right to the doorstep of Benito Mussolini, dictator of the fighters home country.

In a cablegram to Il Duce Malloy urges the dictator to permit Carnera to remain at least until the superheavyweight has fulfilled his match here on August 14.

Carnera Must Seek Help From U. S. Board

Washington, July 26 (US)—Primo Carnera must convince the Immigration Board of Review here Monday that there is a very good reason why he should be allowed to remain in America, or must take a boat back to his native land pronto, it developed today.

Commissioner of Immigration Hull told Universal Service that Primo has been in the country now longer than he is supposed to be allowed to stay.

Commissioner Hull explained that the difficulties into which Primo ran several days ago when he was stopped at the Canadian border while attempting to get into Canada to take part in a scheduled bout were not the part of the United States, but of Canadian officials.

Canadian immigration laws are more strict than those of the United States even, he said, and Primo being an alien the authorities there were not willing to take a chance on allowing him to enter their country and then not be able to get him back into the United States again.

OSIPOWICH OUT TO REGAIN TITLE

Johnny Osipowich Worcester, swimming star, will attempt to regain his ballomite crown today at the champion-ship swimming meet which is being held at Pond Meadow under the auspices of the park commission of Melrose.

Bill Squires, who won the event last year, will defend his crown and it wouldn't be a bit surprising if a new New England record in this event should be hung up. Squires competes under the colors of the Boston Swimming Association.

Besides the men's 880-yard race there will also be two champion ships for the women, the senior 880-yard and the junior 440-yard free style events. All will take part in these races.

In the 440-yard race for the junior crown the Davis sisters Irene and Lillian, of Medford; Constance Reardon and Betty Chapman of the Boston Swimming Association should battle it out for first place. All of these girls are about on par.

New Zealand Beats England at Soccer

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

"Golf a Greatest Teacher"

The three most often projected with regard to gripping is that the hands must work together and pressure shall be the theory of every player, and interwinging and other ways to bring the end of this working together of the hands. Your hands do the work together. The contrary is true if they work against each other all the time. If the object is to make them work together your shortest golf would be the simple subordinate to the thumb and forefingers. Therefore, thumb and forefinger gripping must be tried in any manner as leaves your other fingers clasping ground loose, and relax as with regard to the top of your back swing. If these other fingers are too loose you will have a loosened grip at the top and that will mean loss of control over the club at the turning point. Watch out you do not fall into that error.

(Note:—This time of year the rough is heavy and traps are deep, making it essential to use your niblick effectively. Mr. Horton has a new monograph ready for free distribution, which should enable any player to use his niblick well. To receive this write the Sports Editor, this newspaper, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

BETWEEN INNINGS

By JOE CASHMAN

The biggest surprise of the current big league baseball campaigns is not the remarkable work of the Brooklyn Robins. Neither is it the unexpected strength shown by the Washington Senators. Nor Ted Lyons feat of winning 15 games with the lowly White Sox. Nor any of the other diamond happenings generally regarded as extraordinary.

It is the performance of Lou Gehrig Yankee first baseman, that you read this in leading all the American League batters with a percentage of over .390 the high est mark of his career.

For, while it may not be widely known it was the consensus in baseball circles last fall that Columbia Lou had seen the best days. After burning up the league with his great hitting for three years he slipped to an even .300 last year and any major league manager would have bet money at the start of this season that the Yankee star would never again finish in the select group.

Even the late Miller Huggins was of the opinion that his first baseman as an outstanding player was over and he was on the verge of losing him.

"Failure of my pitchers to come through as I expected and Gehrig's slump in batting licked the Yanks this year and, I fear, will again next season," said Huggins.

Huggins Had Planned to Trade Gehrig to Red Sox

"Don't you expect Gehrig to regain his former stride again next year? asked the coach in amazement.

"No, I don't," replied Hug. "He seems to have lost the knack of hitting and players who do that, rarely regain it. I'm afraid Gehrig will never be a great hitter again."

"Why don't you try to trade him to the Red Sox for a good pitcher, then?" suggested the scout. "He can go back a lot more as a hitter and still be better than anybody Bob Quinn has to color the bag."

"That's not a bad idea," replied the pilot. "Maybe I will do that. At any rate, I will talk to Quinn on my next visit to town."

Huggins never came back. He died in New York hospital on the day the Yanks appeared at the Polo.

Had he lived he might have traded Gehrig to the Sox if he could have grabbed off Ed Morris.

And the Yanks would have been lined and the pennant.

Hub Needs New Ring Stars

LOCAL BOXERS SHOULD BE DEVELOPED BY THE PROMOTERS; BAR FAKERS

By JACK CONWAY

Boston and New England has lost its position as the stronghold of boxing in the United States.

Its champions have been toppled from their thrones. Its title contenders have been halted in their surges towards the fistic heights.

New England today boasts of only a few outstanding ring men. It no longer has many first class boxing heroes to send against the outstanding men from other sections of the country.

Jack Conway

I would not say boxing is dead here. But it is suffering from many serious ills.

Eliminate them and the game will win back the standing it held in the days when the immortal John L. Sullivan stepped out of Boston to lick the world.

Boxing has more followers here than in the days of Sullivan, but they have grown disgusted with conditions surrounding the game. And so they have turned their backs on boxing.

The development of a new crop of New England ring heroes will do more than anything else to restore confidence in the game, to bring the crowds surging back to the ringside.

Boston and New England insists on at least one local boxer in the main bout of every big show. Such a condition creates home-town confidence. The public figures that when a local boy is batting out-of-town opposition that he is in there to win. It does not look with distrust on the match.

The fans know that most of the questionable bouts staged here have featured top-weight foreigners. Perhaps the invading warriors have at times been offering their best efforts, but the fact neither much nor bad a local following has cast suspicion around the matches.

NEW STARS NEEDED

Bring forth a new crop of New England ring stars put them against the best men available and there will be fewer unsatisfactory fights, less talk of fakes and a smaller number of "No Contest" tallings.

Jack Sharkey is today the most outstanding boxer in New England. Unfortunately it is impossible to get Sharkey to box here as he has become an international attraction. No local club could afford to finance a Sharkey match on account of the large purse such a venture would require.

There are, however, local boxers who show promise. We have been much impressed with Ernie Schaaf. He is still a youngster and should improve. His recent victories over Tommy Loughran proved his mettle. Pit Schaaf against Jim Maloney and the fans will quit their strike against boxing.

Johnny Indrisano of East Boston also has a following. Match him with Al Mello, New England welterweight champion, and the show will attract a large crowd.

Andy Callahan against Honeyboy Finnegan, or pitted against Sammy Fuller would also be a popular card.

Henry Lamar showed enough ability in his last three winning starts to warrant an effort to save has arrived as a fistic threat.

There are several thousand boxing fans battling in the amateur and in the preliminary ranks of the prizes who are rearing through with some good battling if given a chance.

Let the promoters stop talking about the lack of suitable cards and make some.

Rome wasn't built in a day. Neither were attractions like Eddie Shevlin, Young Kirby, Matty Baldwin, Nate Bregman, Gilbert Caliant, Kid Goodman, Dave Deshler, the Sullivan twins and other New England stars built up by promoters.

GENIUS OF GOODWIN

The late Tom Goodwin picked up Sharkey, Maloney, Andy Fuller, Finnegan and Suggs when they were virtually unknown and ballyhooed them into tremendous box office attractions. Goodwin had vision and faith in the popularity of boxing and in the ability of New England boys to stand up with the most furious of opposition.

The boxing commission and promoters should be on their guard against the fakers and get-rich-quick boys.

Most bouts that turn out to be fakes have a rotten smell when first announced. A little prevention will avoid most of the howls which go up after the public has been milked. Knock the questionable looking matches on the head when they are first mentioned.

Capable referees and judges are entitled to decent compensation for their work. Don't ask a referee to work for $45 and judges for $15 when the gate is around $50,000 and each of the main bout boxers is pulling down $12,500.

The compensation of the officials comes out of the gross receipts. This means boxers working on a percentage must kick in with their bit. A boxer getting $10,000 and up has not any right to complain if a capable referee is paid $300 and judges $100.

Massachusetts has better ring officials than any other state. They should be rewarded. This will tend to make them feel their services are appreciated and this condition will result in even better work.

Boxing has had fewer scandals here than in any other State. We have had our fake fights and acts, but in most cases the trimmers have been stopped before they could use this public for suckers.

With a little more co-operation between all parties interested in boxing here, there should never be a fake fight in a Massachusetts ring. The Boxing Commission has barred numerous bouts which would have been acts. Promoters and managers should be the first to pledge their aid to the commission in keeping all tankers out of New England.

END AMATEUR EVILS

Those persons closest to boxing should be equally eager to protect the public from the flim-flammers, and in this way not kill the goose that laid the golden eggs.

Amateur officials can aid the cause by curbing the evils of commercialism which has been creeping into the stmon pure sport. Let us return to the days of real sportsmanship.

Under proper conditions, New England boxing can still rise from the ashes and take its old place in the sun.

Beginning in Monday's Boston Evening American, Jack Conway will have the first article of a series on oldtime ring heroes. John L. Sullivan will be his first subject. Don't miss these stories about the lives and battles of some of the world's greatest ring men.

MISS MORRILL IS NEW CHAMP

Manchester-by-the-Sea, July 26—Playing the most brilliant match of her career, Miss Marjorie Morrill of Dedham won the final of the women's invitation tennis tournament for the Essex County cup by defeating Miss Marjorie Gladman of Santa Monica, Cal., here yesterday.

In complete mastery at all times, Miss Morrill won with apparent ease from her more experienced opponent before a critical gallery at the Essex County Club in straight sets, 6—1, 6—2.

The East thus won a leg on the beautiful trophy which has been up for play for six years. Last year it was won by Miss Edith Cross of San Francisco, Cal., eliminated this year in the quarter final round.

Sun Beau Favored to Win Arlington Handicap

Chicago, July 26 (AP)—A purse of around $45,000 was up for grabs among 17 crack stake horses at the second running of the Arlington Handicap today.

The overnight field was big enough to promise a good, hotter race, even though champions were lacking.

Sun Beau, was the favorite, at 8 to 2, with Curate another Eastern horse second choice at 5 to 1. Both have performed well recently, Lady Broadcast, had plenty of followers and was rated as a 6 to 1 shot. The longest price was 50 to 1, on a Kentucky son of Stefan the Great, Jean Valjean.

The race is a mile and a quarter, for three year olds and upward. Sun Beau, with L. Schaefer in the saddle, was called on to carry top weight of 125 pounds.

Curate got in at 108 and Lady Broadcast, one of the two fillies in the overnight list, was assessed only 102 pounds, which with her record mile last week seemed to make her a dangerous contender. The other filly, Easter Stockings, was down for 110 pounds.

Other entrants and weights were: Stars and Stripes 12, Jean Valjean, 107; Pigeon Hole 105; Bath Foot, 102; My Hanle 1 9; Brown Wisdom 110; Sandy Ford 111; Paul Bunyan 112; Plucky Play 101; William T., 110; Hot Toddy 106 and the Nut 114.

English Mayor's Wife Has Expenses Paid

Through the kindness of Mrs. Robert P. Herrick of Dedham, wealth ave Mrs Reuben Salter, wife of the Lord Mayor of Boston, England, will accompany her husband when he visits this city during the observance of Boston Week in September.

Mrs Herrick in a letter to Mayor Curley, stated that it seemed that Mrs. Salter would be unable to come here because of financial difficulties and for that reason she would not share in the honor shown her husband. Enclosed in the letter was a check for $500 which Mrs. Herrick requested be used to defray the expenses of Mrs. Salter's visit.

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

In our mail the other day was a rather interesting bit of information from a large New York advertising agency. It is a discussion on how to pick a good piece of music from a bad one, by Howard Barlow dynamic little conductor of the Philco Symphony Orchestra, who explains what he calls a perfect test of music, designed for those who know nothing about it but would like to learn.

We must admit we do not know or understand music; we know when some particular musical number seems to touch a responsive chord within us. But why it does we do not know; it just pleases us. We can remember and carry a tune pretty well, particularly at a dance or banquet when the boys feel that a little singing would add to the festivities. But that sort of thing is open to argument, whether or not it is music.

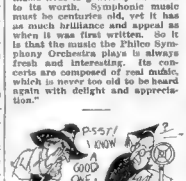
However, what Mr. Barlow has to say has given us a new slant on the subject, which we will pass along to you. He explains:

"Just listen to a piece of music over and over. Listen to it until you know every turn and twist of it by heart. If you can still stand the sound of it after countless repetitions, it is undoubtedly real music.

"Don't let your first reaction to a song affect you; some of the worst pieces of musical junk from Tin Pan Alley have catchy little open-faced melodies that please the first time you hear them. And then—! People have been known to scream in anguish after hearing the same piece of slush played over the radio for the 31st time in a single night. The melodies become deadly with repetition, because they lack real feeling. They are synthetic. That is why popular tunes die so sudden a death.

"Real music is different. There is something deeper and more sincere, something that has a real emotional appeal, in good music. The more you play it the better you like it. Incidentally, not all so-called popular music is bad music by any means. The music from some of our late operettas is gradually being absorbed into the country's repertoire, because they have the spark of real music in them.

"The length of time a piece of music lives in generally an index to its worth. Symphonic music must be centuries old, yet it has as much brilliance and appeal as when it was first written. So it is that the music the Philco Symphony Orchestra plays is always fresh and interesting. Its concerts are composed of real music, which is never too old to be heard again with delight and appreciation."



For the first time in the history of Harvard University a radio microphone will make its appearance within the confines of Harvard Yard, when the technical staff of the Lexington Air Station install their "pick-up" station in Emerson D, for the first of a series of lectures to emanate from that point and to reach the New England radio audience through station WLEX. "Literary and Intellectual Life in Puritan New England," by Professor Kenneth B. Murdock, will be the first of these lectures and will take the air next Wednesday evening, July 30.

The first radio announcer in the world to be appointed chief of an Indian tribe is George Wright of CNRV, Vancouver broadcasting station of the Canadian National Railways. Wright has been made chief of the Squamish Indians and given the title of Chief Sa-Say-Ge-Nas-Chim which translated, means Chief Flying Voice.

Judy Makes a Trip to New York

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Judith Archer is a country school teacher, 23, and good looking. She wants to be a college professor, while her mother would like her to go in the movies. But Judy lived a double life. She becomes interested in the story of a jewel robbery in London. Then she becomes interested in the sailing schedule of an ocean steamer whose captain she knows.

CHAPTER 4

Jonathan Archer, tall and broad-shouldered and proud, standing by the gate before the big old house. It was less old and less weatherbeaten then, and the grounds were not shaggy. A little curly-haired girl clung to his hand.

A man came up the hill; another, who was tall and broad-shouldered and proud. Face the color of winter apples above a ruddy beard. A queer look about his eyes as if he were watching something far away. A queer way of walking; he sort of rolled from side to side as if the street were wavering up and down.

The man rolled up to the gate called to Daddy in a gruff bellow. Daddy said, "Well, Cap'n!" and held up the little girl to kiss the cheek above the ruddy beard.

Presently they went into the house and Peggy brought cider and doughnuts. The man took her on his knee and told her strange stories.

Captain Tells Tales

He told her about the wind howling round a pilot house on rough nights at sea. About waves chattering as they scurried at portholes, dashed their heads against a ship's rail, reached long, white, cold fingers along the storm-swept decks.

He explained to her that the best of all tales and the greatest of all pictures were written and sketched in leaguelong lines of stars. He told her what some of those tales were since he, himself, had read them often enough.

Once Cap'n Charley lived down the hill in the house which now belonged to Marie. He had been like a second daddy . . .

Judy had nothing to say at dinner. Peggy watches her, anxiously wondering if she had quarreled with the principal again.

"How is that nice Mr. Varman, lamb?"

"Mean!" snapped Judy.

"Now, lamb! Independence is very fine—but dear me! It never does for a girl to let men see that she feels herself too capable. They rather like to be the sturdy oaks."

"Who cares?"

"Judy—" Peggy's tone was hurt now. "Judy, every girl's dream is to be a queen in her own little kingdom. Her little kingdom of home. It's woman's heritage, the joy of linking her life with that of the man she loves."

Not True Today
Men Don't Want Queens

"Sounds dramatic, mother. Not true to life, though—not life today. Men don't want a queen around. They want a combination housekeeper and valet and admiring audience and yes-lady. A girl doesn't exactly link her life with her husband's; she sort of trails it on behind. Humble like."

"Judith! Flouting the sacredness of marriage!"

"Oh, listen, mother—what marriage do you know that's sacred? Or even happy? All sentimental stuff! Only way for girls to marry—if they must marry—is to have an understanding of independence. Let the husband and wife meet once in a while without obligation on either side. Be free to come and go as they please. Let the wife hold a position if she

JUDGE ADLOW SAYS NEEDY ARE LOSERS

"Number Racket Is More Than a Nuisance," Declares the Court After Lottery Raid

Declaring the "number racket" or "nigger pool" is "more than a nuisance," Judge Elijah Adlow in municipal court today imposed heavy fines on six men arrested in a raid yesterday on the alleged headquarters of the lottery.

Judge Adlow said workingmen are spending from $10 to $25 a week on tickets for the pool, with the result that their families suffered.

Jacob Cohen, who, Attorney John Drew said was willing to plead guilty to setting up and promoting a pool, was fined $500 on that charge and $50 for being present where gaming implements were found.

APPEALS $500 FINE.

Joseph Taylor, Brighton st., West End; Samuel Goodman, Intervale st., Dorchester; Louis Wenstein, Kamboldt ave., Dorchester, and Harry and George Harris, both of Columbus ave., South End, were fined $50 each for being present.

All paid the fines for being present, thereby confirming the statement of Judge Adlow that "there is no doubt they can pay $50, instead of the usual $10 fine."

Cohen gave a Grimes st., Dorchester, address, paid the $50 fine but appealed that of $500.

The defendants were arrested in a raid late yesterday on a Lincoln st. office by Capt. Jeremiah F. Callihan of the Lakeville st. division and Capt. John M. Anderson of the East Dedham st. division.

FIND 75,000 TICKETS

Judge Adlow listened to Special Officers James Britt and Robert Dalton who told of having found 75,000 lottery slips, adding machines and other paraphernalia and of having turned over to him a balance sheet.

After studying the sheet the Court exclaimed:

"Why, this could run into $100,000 in a short time. It seems to me to be a very serious matter.

"This number racket, commonly called the 'Nigger Pool,' is worse than a nuisance. Complaints are brought by showing that men play between $10 and $25 a week on the numbers. When it is time to face their families with their pay envelopes they haven't got enough left to more than get over the weekend."

Starts Early as Speeder

BILLY BERG, 3, of Cambridge, believes in driving an auto despite his tender years. Yesterday he started his father's machine and wound up against the side of a house on Putnam ave., Cambridge, after flattening a picket fence. Despite the fence-busting episode he was back at the wheel of his father's machine looking for more thrills. (Staff photos.)

BOY, 3, STARTS AUTO DRIVING EARLY IN LIFE

Smashes a Fence and Lands Against House in First Try at Wheel of Dad's Car

In this motor age there is nothing like getting an early start in life for getting acquainted with the operation of automobiles.

This is the belief of Billy Berg, 3-year-old son of Mr and Mrs Herbert Berg 11 Peters st, Cambridge. Believe it or not Billy is an ardent auto fan and can usually be found parked behind the wheel of any car near his home.

Billy climbed into the seat of the truck and decided it was an opportunity to put his theories into practice. He started the motor and the car began to roll along Peters st.

The great adventure was under way. The truck gathered momentum and sped down to the corner of Peters st. and Putnam ave., where it crossed and entered Putnam st.

Billy turned the wheel and headed the truck toward the corner house, 567 Putnam ave. A picket fence confronted him, but that was nothing to Billy, a young life. He was going places and the fence was a minor matter. The truck crashed the fence and finally came to rest against the house.

The irresistible force had met the immovable object. Billy's journey was at an end. Billy was smiling and unhurt. The net damage was a badly battered hood on the truck and a gaping hole in the fence. Today Billy seemed to think little of his exploit and was found playing in another auto parked in front of his home.

Former Hub Man Dies in Ireland

William A Clancy, 52, former Boston newspaperman, and one of the first Irish teachers to establish an Irish class in this city, died at his home in Clifden, Ireland, two weeks ago, according to letters received by his friends here today.

While a resident of Boston he was active in politics and at one time campaigned for Mayor Curley, whose brother was to visit him this Fall. He was a member of the Boston Press Club and was secretary of the Boston Canoe Club for many years.

Ex-Mayor Nichols' Condition Good

The condition of former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols operated upon at the Charles ste Hospital, Cambridge yesterday, was reported last night to be "very good."

The operation upon the ex-mayor was performed by Dr John H. Cunningham, Jr., of 46 Gloucester st., Back Bay.

Funeral Today for Hugh Montgomery

Funeral services for the late Hugh Montgomery, one of the founders of "Montgomery Bros" Company, Boston, were held this afternoon at Mt. Auburn Cemetery chapel. Interment was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery. Mr. Montgomery died suddenly Thursday at his home, 32 Arlington st., Cambridge.

Cong. Douglass Has a Restful Night

City Hospital officials today reported that while Congressman John J. Douglass' name was still on the danger list he has spent a good night, and was resting comfortably.

The Congressman has been in the hospital for eight days since he was stricken with two pulmonary hemorrhages.

Conry Announces Two Parking Bans

Two traffic changes in widely separated districts of Boston were announced today by Commissioner Joseph A. Conry.

No parking will be allowed on Caledonia st., West Roxbury, between Aug. 2 and Sept. 1 while picnics are in order at Caledonian Grove. For four weeks no parking will be allowed on Billerica st., West End, between Cotting and Minot sts., beginning July 29.

Demurrage on Mail Effective on Oct. 1

Demurrage charges of five cents a day on domestic registered and unregistered collect-on-delivery mail after 15 days of receipt will become effective on Oct. 1, it was announced at the Boston postoffice today.

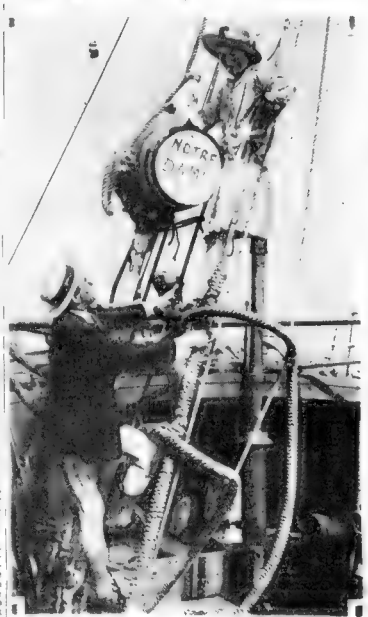
$100 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston American offers the opportunity. Every week $100 in prizes will be given for news tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

There will be $25 given weekly for the best, first exclusive news tip received, $15 for the next best, $10 for the next best and $2 prizes for each of the 25 next most valuable tips. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

Fleet Back in Marblehead



TIMOTHY SULLIVAN — WILLIAM KELLY

William Kelly and Timothy Sullivan, fish pier workers, had the time of their lives when they went to Marblehead today with the fishing fleet in honor of the tercentenary celebration of the North Shore town. Kelly dressed as a girl and Sullivan in "shorts" gave the crowd many a laugh with their clownish antics. (Staff photo.)

FISHING FLEET AT MARBLEHEAD

Marblehead harbor, famed in history as the birthplace of the United States Navy and once the leading fishing port of the country, returned to a semblance of its former glory today when a fleet of fishing schooners entered the harbor and dropped anchor as a part of Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary celebration.

The entire program for the day was sponsored by the Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary Association which has a membership of 1900 and whose owners of fishing craft sent their vessels to the town for the part it has taken in the advancement of the industry.

Yacht clubs and individuals owning power boats furnished transportation for visitors on the fishing boats and at noon a luncheon with 1000 reservations was tendered by the committee at the Hotel Rockmere.

The history of the town compiled by Raymond O Brackett, recited the foundation of its fishing industry.

The port became the birthplace of the United States Navy when Washington on Sept 2, 1775, ordered that the schooner Hannah of Marblehead, be armed and manned by Marblehead fishermen from Gen. John Glover's Regiment, to cruise against enemy ships.

BOARD HAILS SUGGESTION BY BOSTON AMERICAN

Was Offered Also by Commissioner Rourke to Aid the Light Signal System

Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry today hailed as "of great value at this moment" the Boston Evening American's suggestion that bells be used in connection with the new signal system at congested corners, to announce the shifting of signals.

He said that Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke, whom he described as an outstanding expert on highway transportation, had made a somewhat similar suggestion, and that both were under consideration by the traffic commission.

"The Boston American has suggested the establishment of bells at congested corners to prepare the pedestrian for his right to cross the street," Commissioner Conry said. "The suggestion made by the American is interesting and of value at this moment.

BOTH CONSIDERED

"Joseph A. Rourke, public works commissioner of Boston, a gentleman of advanced information in regard to highway transportation, who is also an associate member of the traffic commission, offered a similar suggestion last Thursday.

"Because of Mr. Rourke's qualifications as an expert, his idea for installing a synchronized ticking bell at congested corners as an invitation to the pedestrians to cross in safety is receiving serious study by our engineering department, as is the American's suggestion.

"It will be remembered that a traffic signal system is installed for the purpose of keeping traffic moving. The pedestrian is entitled to every consideration. He is the one with money in his pocket who visits our stores and buys.

"He is the one who patronizes our cafes. He attends theaters and other places of amusement. He must always be made welcome on the streets of Boston and his safety must be assured.

"Pedestrian traffic is flexible in comparison, the motor traffic is rigid. Remember that the traffic signal is installed for the purpose of keeping traffic in motion. The automobile must not be afflicted with any lingering disease.

CAUTIOUS AUTOISTS

"The automobilist must by his example encourage activity, but he must not be guilty of recklessness. If he will harmonize with the movement of the signal lights, the motorist will guarantee safety to himself and other drivers, and the pedestrian will be guaranteed safety in crossing the streets.

"A few weeks' experience may disclose that it is necessary to readjust some of the timers in order that the pedestrian may have a few additional seconds to cross the streets. A system, however, has to regulate the flow of all traffic, and if it lengthens the time of the pedestrian, it shortens the time for the motorist."

By request of Mayor Curley, Commissioner Conry today promised to have "no parking" signs put up in the vicinity of Postoffice sq. Contractors who are to put in the foundation for the new postoffice, calling on the Mayor today, informed him that work would be done in two shifts and asked for the "no parking" regulation.

Policemen's Autos in Crash, Children Hurt

Two children of Patrolman Edward J. Riley of Station 3, Boston, were injured in Chelsea sq. today when his auto was hit by a sedan operated by Patrolman William J. McDermott of Malden police. Riley was forced to turn his car sharply to avoid another that had turned out from the curb and was sideswiped by the Malden officer's car.

Florence Riley, 4, and Edward 5, occupying the rear seat, were cut by flying glass. They were treated at Memorial Hospital and sent home.

Stage and Screen

KNOWS SILK 'N' SATIN 'N' ALL ELSE

By HARRIS MORGAN

IF EVER A STAGE producer knew "all his onions," and all the other vegetables besides, that man is Alexander Leftwich. He knows the theater in and out. He has devoted 30 years of his still young life to show business. Having an innately inquisitive brain, he has absorbed all the ins and outs amid all the ups and downs of an active career. Now he has shoved all his experience into the hopper, and out of it has come an up-to-the-minute revue. This is "Tattle Tales," now at the Wilbur.

• • •

MR. LEFTWICH is a hard worker. Day in, and day out, evenings, and the early morning hours, he has kept on the job. He is tireless in his task of putting everything pertaining to the revue form of entertainment, into "Tattle Tales." Changes here and changes there, always constructive in his effort—and the result is a production that is both an eyeful and an earful. On stage are beauty and youth and talent and gorgeously toned settings. Go in search of the producer of all this and you are sure to find him in about the most unpretentious garb man could put on. This brings up the story of that everlasting and unforgettable sweater of his. When on the job, he is never without it.

Alexander Leftwich

• • •

IT NEVER WAS MUCH of a sweater—when it was new it cost only $2.49 at a mark-down sale. That was several years ago and today it is less presentable than ever. The sleeves are frayed and tattered; it is spotted and dirty; only two of its original complement of buttons remain—but you couldn't buy that sweater today for $10,000. It is a typical of him as the undershot pipe is of Charles Dawes. He has been wearing it now ever since his wife bought it for him just before he started to direct the rehearsals of Al Jolson's "Big Boy." And every show, with but one exception, that he has staged since then has been a big one, they are: "Big Boy," "Artists and Models," "Rain or Shine," "Chi-Chi," "Present Arms," "Vanities," "Hold Everything," "Connecticut Yankee," "Hit the Deck," "Heads Up," "Spring Is Here," "The Little Show," and "Strike Up the Band." The one exception—and this was no fault of Mr. Leftwich's—was "The Nine-Fifteen Revue."

• • •

Mr. Leftwich, in search of the songs and sketches, went to the farthest corners of this country in his quest. Many of the "Tattle Tales" folk are new to Eastern legitimate theatergoers, although most of them have been seen in theaters here that play vaudeville and units. Alfred Cheney Johnston, famous photographer, who is the art director, is from Maine, while Florence Calkins is from Detroit. She is the stylist for the show. Mr. Leftwich is from Virginia, and Alex Yokel, his associate, is from Chicago. Jack Haskell, dance director, is from Cleveland, and Gustave Salter, musical director, hails from Budapest, although he has been here for many years, and is one of the most popular musical men in the theater business.

10 DIRECTORS ARE PICKED AS BEST

More than 300 newspaper, fan magazine and trade paper critics representing every section of the country, have selected Alfred E. Green as the greatest director of 1929-30 in balloting in annual poll of The Film Daily to determine the "Ten Best Directors." Green is the director of "Disraeli," talking picture which the reviewers voted the best film of 1929 in the annual Film Daily poll announced last January.

The Ten Best Directors of 1929-30, as selected in the trade paper's fifth annual poll are

Comprising the honor roll representing directors who received 75 votes or more are: David Butler, John Cromwell, Harry Beaumont, Luther Reed, Ludwig Berger, Raoul Walsh, John Ford, Frank Tuttle, Dorothy Arzner, Edmund Goulding, Frank Capra, Hobart Henley, Wesley Ruggles, F. Richard Jones, Alan Crosland, Victor Fleming, Cecil B. DeMille, Frank Borzage, Henry King, Richard Wallace, Michael Curtiz, Bayard Veiller, Robert Z. Leonard, Millard Webb, Alfred Santell and Sam Taylor

Vidor—"Hallelujah" and "Not So Dumb"

Franklin—"Last of Mrs. Cheney" and "Devil May Care."

CARVING SOAP HIS HOBBY

Collecting railroad time tables and carving figures out of soap are two of Frank Albertson's hobbies. Albertson who plays one of the leading roles in Wild Company, movietone drama now at the New B. F. Keith's, possesses a time table for every railroad in America. He says he amuses himself by the hour in studying them and planning imaginary trips.

As a result, Albertson is able to give interesting and complete information relating to time of departures and arrivals of trains in all the big cities, and answers most of the connections with other roads, his friends say.

Albertson declares that as a memory course it has no equal, and besides that, it embraces entertaining values as well as worthwhile and useful knowledge.

ACTOR IS ALSO AN AUTHOR

Elliott Nugent, who plays the romantic lead in Lon Chaney's first talking picture, "The Unholy Three," at Loew's Orpheum next week, is the son of J. C. Nugent, the noted actor-playwright, and together with his father wrote the dialogue for the picture. Young Nugent was born at Dover, O., and made his first stage appearance in the Los Angeles Orpheum when he was four. He has been on the stage pretty much since that time, although he managed to get in schooling at the Ohio State University between shows. He collaborated with his father on several plays, including "Kempy," and brought out "The Poor Nut," with himself as star, director and producer. He made his debut in talking pictures in "So This Is College" and was later seen in "Not So Dumb" and "Wise Girls."

Elliott Nugent

VAMP SEEN AS MANNEQUIN

Gwen Lee a little blonde film beauty with a personality all her own and a gift for provoking mirth with her screen "vamps" and "beautiful-but-dumb" roles, will be seen at Loew's State next week in a manne-quin role in Joan Crawford's newest picture "Our Blushing Brides." Miss Lee who was born in Hastings, Nebraska, is a Wampas Baby Star of 1928. Four years ago she went to Hollywood to play a minor role in Lady of the Night," a Norma Shearer vehicle.

CURTAIN NOW RINGS DOWN ON STAR

One of the saddest of recent stories out of the Hollywood movie colony is that of the passing of Lila Lee. Filmdom has sent forth tragedies of various kinds; those on the film "lane" flicker tales that are no more touching than the real life incidents to a number of the actor folk. Victim in what one may term a love collapse, followed by ill health, Miss Lee is suddenly removed from the vicinity of the lots, to the wide open spaces where sun and air may restore her to health.

Miss Lee is to be seen now in "Double Cross Roads," feature opening today at the Keith-Albee. Although only 24, Miss Lee is a veteran with 20 years of experience. She began as a child. She played for several years in vaudeville opposite George Jessel, in Gus Edward's Song Revues, and her singing and dancing success led to her appearance in pictures. "Male and Female," "Rack Horns and Broke," and "Just Married."

With the advent of talking pictures, she was chosen by Fox Movietone to play the leading feminine role opposite her former co-star, George Jessel, in "Love, Live and Laugh." In "Double Cross Roads," in which she enacts the character of the girl with whom Robert Ames, as the youthful crook in the talkies, falls in love after he has been released from prison and decides to go straight. In recent months she rose rapidly and was in great demand in the studios.

Bowdoin Sq. Theater

"The Bad One," with Delores Del Rio and Edmund Lowe, is the film feature at the Bowdoin Sq. next week. Another picture will present Billie Dove and Russ Rathbone in "A Notorious Affair." Selected vaudeville will hold the center the stage.

Captivating

JOAN CRAWFORD

AIRMINDED FOLK WILL GO ZOOM!

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"The Dawn Patrol," now being shown at the Washington St. Olympia and the Uptown, is an epic of the air. It reveals the aces in war time flying. Being cast without the Kiplingish "rag, a bone, a hank o' hair," it necessarily carries one back to "Journey's End," and also to "Men Without Women," though in this last women did appear in what may be termed the prologue sequences.

• • •

LIKE THE OTHER two films named, "The Dawn Patrol" requires the cleverest characterization to put it across. The fliers show the results of the terrific strain of life at the front. Courtney, the chief, first is then the liquor is more frequently and deeply gulped down. Scott's young brother arrives, and is ordered into the air—to his death. Scott accuses Courtney, and the friendship of these two is smashed. Soon come instructions to blow up an enemy munition dump. Courtney wants to go, but as commander cannot. He calls for volunteers. Scott is eager; he wishes to avenge his brother's doom. But Courtney works out a plan of his own; what it is and how he does it is worth the trip to see it done on the screen.

THIS PICTURE SHOULD prove great for the box office. It has its appeal for the fans, and it has its strong appeal for the airminded. The action scenes are really exciting; there are speed to the picture, and splendid photography. That its direction is good is praise for Howard Hawks. He has gotten all the most out of his opportunity, and uses his cameras to fine advantage.

• • •

OF THE PLAYERS three stand out strikingly for what they do—Richard Barthelmess, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Neil Hamilton. Mr. Barthelmess is better than in any film of his for many moons. Mr. Fairbanks is surprisingly fine, and Mr. Hamilton has the best job of his career. And these three are competently supported.

"The Dawn Patrol" is good entertainment.

COMEDIAN AT TOP OF BILL

One of the best-known headliners in vaudeville, Al Tucker and his "society" orchestra, will head the seven-act stage show at the Scollay Monday, while William Powell will be featured on the screen in his latest success, "For the Defense."

Mr. Tucker and his band are versatile, funnmaking comedy, singing and dancing, besides some excellent orchestral novelties.

THE WEATHER MAN HELPS

And now the United States weather bureau has done its bit for the movies!

In order that every detail of the weather bureau set used in "Murder Will Out," First National and Vitaphone picture now at the Modern, would be absolutely correct, employes of the federal meteorological department volunteered their services in supervising the construction of the set.

NOVARRO TO DIRECT HIS OWN FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

LOS ANGELES July 25 Ramon Novarro has talked himself into a director's job and he is that pleased. He has thoroughly convinced the executives at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that he and nobody else should be allowed to direct the Spanish version of "The Singer of Seville."

* * *

WHILE RAMON is directing he will also play the leading role. His leading lady, Concha Montenegro, is the Latin Spanish girl who was cast opposite Buster Keaton in "The Dough Boy." Concha was a dancer in Madrid and she has all the charm of her race. The English version, starring Ramon, will be released in about two months. Meanwhile he will do a few extra chores directing. But since he is the sort of lad who always wants to do something besides acting, he won't mind working overtime in the least. Wonder if he has put the notion of going on the concert stage out of his mind?

* * *

THE PRODUCERS have learned that the public wants comedy. When "Whoopee" was shown in San Bernardino a few weeks ago the audience doubled up with laughter and pronounced it the funniest musical comedy they had ever seen. When Warner Brothers bring "Fifty Million Frenchmen" to the screen there will be no lack of fun. Lester Crawford and Helen Broderick, who played the comedy leads in the New York company, have been signed and will arrive here August 1. Olsen and Johnson, the popular comedy team, have also been signed. Lloyd Bacon will direct and Al Boasberg is writing the dialogue. I am wondering about Wallace Gaston, Genevieve Tobin and Dorothy Day, all of whom did such good work in the stage play.

One of the most interesting romances in Hollywood is that of Betty Compson and Hugh Trevor. The handsome blond leading man and nephew of Mr. Wallace Beery and Noah Beery of RKO has been very devoted to Betty these last few weeks, seen everywhere together, enjoying dancing and lunching. Betty has invited her home on Hollywood Boulevard, the house which she rented to the Sam Hardys for several years, and she has had it one of the most livable houses in California. Her divorce from James Crane is only a few months old so if there is any thought of marriage it will not be for a year hence. Hugh Trevor's next picture is "The Lone Eagle," a telling story of "Crime," opposite Marian Nixon.

* * *

MARIE CORDA, the blonde "Helen of Troy," is in New York. Marie is waiting the arrival of Alexander Corda, who is on his way to Europe to comply with the immigration laws. A few months ago Mrs. Corda gave out an interview in which she said she would return to her husband in a minute if he wanted her.

* * *

WHILE MARY PICKFORD admits it's a temptation she is unable to accept Arch Selwyn's offer to bring to the stage the role that Maude Adams created in "Quality Street." Mary has to finish "Secrets" for the screen and it's taking a long time because Sam Taylor is still working on a new version. Mary and Doug have been at Santa Monica during the hot weather, coming to town only when it was absolutely necessary, but since Doug is called for August 4 for "Reaching for the Moon" they will probably take up their residences in Pickfair again. "Quality Street" was one of Marion Davies' most artistic pictures.

* * *

Airminded

RICHARD BARTHELMESS
MR. BARTHELMESS is a hero of the air in "Dawn Patrol," at the Uptown and Olympia.

NAME AGAIN IS LIGHTED

Jefferson De Angelis, veteran comic opera comedian and musical comedy celebrity, who recently celebrated the 60th anniversary of his first appearance on the stage, will be starred for the first time in a score of years when he comes to the Plymouth on Labor Day in "Apron Strings," the somewhat ruddy farce comedy in which he has been appearing for the last seven months on Broadway. The farce will be brought to Boston on the Monday following the close of its long run at the Forty-Eighth Street Theater in New York.

Mr. De Angelis, it will be remembered, "went legitimate" a few seasons back when he created the role of the mellow old-time theatrical manager in "The Royal Family." In "Apron Strings" he plays a whimsical and racy septuagenarian lawyer.

REVUE STAGE HIT AT MET

On the Metropolitan stage this week is shown a notable Jack Partington revue, "High Speed," with Eddie Stanley as master of ceremonies and with the following featured artists: Deno and Rochelle, dancing Apaches. HAL SKELLY IS TO BE IN HUB NEXT WEEK

Hal Skelly noted comedian of the stage and screen and Allen Kearns, famed who has been featured in

Hal Skelly

[illegible] past few years, have just been signed up by Alexander Leftwich producer of [illegible] to join that revue at the Wilbur for the latter part of next week. Mr. Skelly will be seen with Ilka Chase in the new Leftwich show. He came a second time and later put his name on the dotted line. The two men will be a tremendous asset to the revue, whose one weakness has been in not having enough comedy. In the present cast are tip top comic stars but more were the need, and mass that lack is filled.

Mr. Leftwich has made a number of changes in the numbers and settings in the past two weeks, with a result that "Tatters Tales" looks almost like a new production. Some numbers have gone into the discard and snappier ones have been substituted.

Mr. Skelly is at present making a film on Long Island. This will require his time through Tuesday, toward the end of the week he and Mr. Kearns will join the Wilbur revue.

Eric, Sent for by Father, Will Speak to Him of Marrying Raquel

CHAPTER 51

That part of Paris which flashes and froths and whirls giddily in its frenzied flight toward pleasure rejoiced that Alphonse Courbet had returned from a hurried trip to the States.

Once more the magic carpets in Alphonse's splendid apartment just off the Champs Elysees would transport them to the ultimate heaven of their delight. A savant of all things beautiful, exotic, lavish, he promised to outdo all previous attempts at originality and abandon in entertainment. Not to be outdone, the guest of Alphonse was to admit oneself an outsider in the world of fashion and frivolity.

The center of these Arabian Night revels was invariably "le lis noir." The mysterious young woman of black and white loveliness, reputed to be a Spanish lady of high degree, who had come to Paris by way of America for a reason no one seemed able to discover.

I've been told Eric's father, the present head of the Stafford line, believes his sons should stand on their own feet. It's a tradition in the family."

"Well, you can't eat traditions, or wear them, or bathe in them, either. The old boy ought to loosen up."

"Eric is clever."

"Then he'd better convert his cleverness into cash before he takes you on, old dear. That costume Alphonse is creating for you to wear to the Louie fete will set the firm back several hundred pounds, or guineas, or whatever it is they use for money in dah ol' Lunnon."

As was freely predicted, "le lis noir" proved her undisputed right to reign as queen of beauty at the Louis XVI fete. The rooms had been transformed into exact reproductions of those in Versailles for the event.

Through them moved that breath-taking young woman of mystery, Raquel Rojos—"le lis noir." In creamy satin embroidered so thickly with seed-pearls and crystals that the billowing skirts would easily stand of themselves. Her feet encased in pearl-embroidered slippers, played in and out like winged things among the priceless lace of her petticoats. She did not affect the powdered wig of the period. The sable cloud of her hair, piled high, was held in place with garlands of orange blossoms.

"You are supreme, ma petite," Alphonse told her. "You are perfect. You cannot be more so." He was startled by the unbelievable skill with which he had wrought.

Raquel gazed down at the billowing skirts. Pearls and crystals and creamy satin. For the merest flick of a second her eyes saw a sleazy red silk dress, scuffed shapeless black shoes. If Lucy—her mother—could see her this night!

She had not thought of her mother in weeks. Not since she saw the little bow with the wistful eyes playing a violin on the streets. Baby Jose. She gave the boy a handful of francs. For her brother, Baby Jose.

Eric Stafford, a proud courtier in blue and silver, was at her side. Impatient to be rid with her. What would the proud Lord Stafford think of Lucy's daughter? Of Pancho Rojos' girl Raquel. She smiled. The thought of Lucy and of Pancho in the ancestral halls of the Staffords had a humorous appeal to her. Lit tle Jose riding on a fat, sleek pony with a groom at its head.

"You are more lustrous than the finest gem that was ever carved," Eric told her. Awkwardly. Superlatives did not come easy with him. "You are lovelier than the rarest flower that ever bloomed. You are Circe and Venus — dawn and dusk—"

"Please, Eric. This from you?" Raquel tapped him playfully with a miniature fan that was a cobweb with the dew upon it.

His lips were stern.

"London?" Raquel fought back her chagrin.

"Yes. The pater cabled me today. I'll fly over and be back at the beginning of the week. It's just around the corner, you know, now that we take it by air. The pater says he has something important to talk over with me. And I must see him, too."

Much Whispering
About "Le Lis Noir"

Alphonse had undertaken to establish "le lis noir"—called Raquel Rojos—queen of beauty in the capacity of Venus. He had succeeded magnificently.

There was to be a reproduction of a fete of Louis XVI in the apartment of Alphonse. Fashionable circles buzzed in anticipation of the event. Frivolity accelerated its pace, preened before mirrors, polished its jewels.

There was much whispering too, behind hands in drawing-rooms, over dinner tables, at late suppers in smart cafes.

"Le lis noir has captured Eric Stafford," one would confide.

"His fancy, perhaps—not his heart," the other asserted.

"Both he will make her Lady Stafford if he can."

"Nonsense."

If these rumors and rumblings reached the ears of Alphonse, he gave no sign.

"Are you seriously thinking of adding a handle to your name?" Greta asked Raquel one evening when they had had tea in the garden and Eric Stafford lingered so long they had to rush into their dinner clothes.

She turned to Greta now, drooping delicate cream lids over thoughtful black eyes until their sable lashes swept her cheeks.

Eric Clever
Cash Better, Says Greta

"Perhaps," she said laconically.

"Better think it over," Greta advised. "They tell me the ancestral castles have plenty of drafts, but no bathrooms."

"Raquel laughed. "I do like my bath," she said.

"Hmm. Perfumed. In a sunken tub. They don't have these little novelties on the Left Bank, where Eric lives while in Paris."

"No. He lives very simply.

My House

My house must stand
Just back from the beach
Where storm-tossed flecks
Of spray can reach
My house must have
A bare, white floor,
Sea wind on the roof,
The sea at the door
While summer laughs
And the air is sweet,
I shall run with the surf
About my feet
I shall call to the gulls
As they scream above
I shall swim far out
Through the waves I love
And when winter snarls
At the crouching earth
By the driftwood fire
I shall drowse at my hearth
My House must be
A thing so small
That the sea's great roar
Will shake each wall

His eyes sought hers. They told her—oh, so plainly—why this son must see his father.

"When I return, Raquel, I shall have something to ask you. That will be my heaven —or my hell."

She flirted with her fan. He must not know which it was to be until—until she herself was sure. She could decide while he was away in London.

She turned. Someone had touched her arm.

"Princess—Miss Raquel—I have been searching everywhere for you," cards a creature that was so terrifying she drew back instinctively. "Have you seen my Elsworth?"

"Bosart!" breathed Raquel. "I scarcely recognized you—"

"I've been in Vienna for the the treatment. It's done wonders. Elsworth can't believe it. He's fallen in love with me all over again."

Raquel thought: If this creature thinks anything of our marriage she will crack apart, disintegrate into a little heap of desert dust.

"I must find Elsworth," Mrs. Bosart cackled on. "He'll be delighted to see you—the remarkable resemblance between us, you know—except I've gone back to Titian for the hair. Must life in Titian."

"Who is that grisly marionette?" asked Stafford, fascinated, as Raquel had been, by the sheer terror of what science had done.

"That," said Raquel, her eyes peering into distant space and wide with fear of what she saw there, "is my specter."

Beauty A La Mode -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

BEAUTY HERSELF is eternal. But she has her modes and fashions, just as the feminine frock and everything else under the sun has. Somebody said that change was the one unchanging thing in the world. One short life is enough for an entire change of character, and a man can change his mind more than once in the cramped space of a day.

The Ugly Duckling of the school yard whose hair ribbon is safe from the little Blue Veinetian garden-party that all the big Bills crowd the pond over in later years. The youth whose hair and eyes caused a pain in the chest of you at the age of 13 looks odd and old fashioned now with his abundant locks and high collar. Where is the lover of yesteryear? Unless you have lived with him through changes of face and fashion he is just where the sea of that year belongs—long melted and gone. His portrait now wakes smiles instead of sighs. How the world changes, says you!

The girl who walked the streets in beauty when your Daddy was a young spark who hung his dreams on [illegible] are and his head shinned down the elm at the corner of the farm [illegible] when [illegible] was [illegible] the girl who walked the streets in beauty [illegible] they painted [illegible] dream of [illegible] to [illegible] when they saved [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] look odd to you today. NEWS OF Trends of the Day MAJOR New York List MARKETS

U. S. Steel Brought Ahead as a Leader in Wall Street

New York, July 26—With U. S. Steel brought forward as a leader, today's short trading hours in Wall Street witnessed a brisk upturn that carried important shares out of the narrow run in which they have traveled in recent sessions.

Popular trading shares were bid up 1 to 5 points, as professional operations for the advance were encouraged by the complete drying up of offerings in yesterday's declines, resulting in a rally before the close. Shorts who had put out experimental lines recently rushed to cover their commitments.

SOME PROFIT-TAKING

The market continued a highly professional affair, in the absence of decisive business news, with affairs generally in the grip of summer slump. A moderately cheerful tone was maintained in the week-end business and trade reviews, however, which served to bolster bullish sentiment.

Such pool favorites as Case and Vanadium rose about 5 points. General motors, one of the most stable issues in which a strong speculative group has been working, rose more than a point. Radio was bid up a point or so early in the session, but the move in this issue veered out toward the finish.

U. S. Steel again came forward as a leader, as it was late yesterday, and added up more than 2 points, partially in response to fairly pleasing forecasts of the second quarter earnings, to be disclosed next Tuesday.

TELEPHONE A FEATURE

American Telephone was a strong feature of the late trading, rising more than 3 points. Sponsors of the move in this issue assert that there has been a steady stream of investment accumulation in it of late, and that it should do better marketwise after the expiration of the rights Aug. 1.

A group of active floor traders and a few professional operators appeared to provide the bulk of the day's trading, but it showed fair acceleration over the low levels of the early hours of yesterday. Many traders had left town for the weekend, so the active group had things pretty much to themselves.

The gain carried the general level of prices well into the peak area reached late last week, when technical reaction set in.

Commission house sentiment continued in the main mildly bullish, although several looked for further irregularity, and one market letter writer expressed the opinion that it was useless to make any recommendations while the market remains primarily a scalping affair for traders.

OIL PACE FAILS

News from the oil industry was a little less favorable. The scale of marketing practices appeared apparently jeopardized by withdrawal of Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. and the curtailment program in the Kettleman Hills of Texas, appeared to have broken down completely, for the moment at least.

Earnings statements coming to hand continued to show numerous exceptions to the downward trend. In the assortment of June net operating income reports from railways, Missouri Pacific's was conspicuous, approximating the results of June of a year ago. Reports from the steel industry included announcement that Youngstown Sheet would maintain operations at the present rate next week.

The rails were irregular, Chesapeake & Ohio and Chesapeake Corp. closed ½ higher, but Union Pacific was off nearly 3 and Atchison 1, having been down 3¼.

General Electric, Public Service of N. J. and American Can closed up 1 to 2 points. Radio lost all of an early rise of a point. The close was firm.

Resistance Offered to Bears Is Cheering

Resistance offered to the bear attacks in Wall st. this week has been encouraging to the bulls looking for the upside. Many believe the market to be oversold.

Yesterday's one-third of the day's five hours of trading, as measured by volume, was done in the final hour. As prices were worked up, this fact was considered favorable. The fact is that the stock market lately has been making very little response either to good news or bad.

MARKET'S ACTION LESS ENCOURAGING

Failure of the market to push through last week's rather sharply recurling in liquidation on the part of chart readers as well as from some of those recently active on the "bull side" of the market appears it is pointed out that the market displays a tired appearance and that a period of consolidation would be welcome at the present time. Consequently, bull leaders are disposed to take a position in the market for the time being in order to permit the market to consolidate its recent gains in better fashion

SHORT COVERING BIG RELIEF FACTOR

Extent which short covering played in the recent recovery is clearly indicated by the fact that brokers' loans increased only $425,000,000 during the past fortnight.

NATIONAL POWER PLANS EXPLAINED

Officials of National Power & Light have important plans under consideration which involve the increased distribution of power in the territory served by the company. It is understood that negotiations have practically been concluded between Pennsylvania Power & Light, a subsidiary of National Power, for the sale of electric current and power to Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron Co.

National Power, it has been learned, also is negotiating with several other companies in Pennsylvania for the sale of its product. This, however, is the furthest that such expansion plans are being considered. Incidentally it may be stated that the company has no merger plans under consideration at present.

ACCUMULATION IN WESTERN UNION

Although Western Union normally is unattractive as a speculative element owing to its conservative management, important accumulation has been noticeable recently. This partially represents investment buying as well as some renewed speculative interest, attracted by the yield of approximately 8 per cent. Furthermore, interests in close touch with the company indicate that operations during the second half of the year will prove more profitable than in the first six months, due in part to a reduction in operating expenses.

AMERICAN CAN IS ACCORDED SUPPORT

American Can, meeting good scale-down support from banking interests, due to the knowledge of important developments to be announced shortly.

INVESTMENT TRUST SELLING ITS RADIO

BIG GENERAL MOTORS OPERATION PENDING

Encouraged by the six-months' statement showing 50 per cent margin over dividend requirements, it is reported that a large-scale bull operation is planned in General Motors.

KENNECOTT CUT IN DIVIDEND DOUBTED

Strength in Kennecott Copper discouraged continued talk that its dividend would be further reduced. Demand for the stock was also induced by the more encouraging copper trade news.

GREAT WESTERN MAKING PROGRESS

Demand for Chicago Great Western preferred is evident on all setbacks, encouraged by appreciation of the fact that the road's net operating income in the first half of the year increased 61 per cent, and that for the first time in its history the first six months' results exceeded interest charges.

UNION CARBIDES FUTURE STUDIED

Union Carbide has been fluctuating with the general list of high-grade stocks, but considerable long-term investment buying has taken place. Part of this demand, is based on realization that $53,000,000 cash funds were distributed last year through sale of stock, the proceeds of which were applied to further developments, part of which may not be disclosed immediately.

S. O. OF JERSEY HOLDS FIRM

Firmness prevailed in Standard of New Jersey although fairly aggressive sponsorship was evident. The stock is the favorite of a powerful speculative leader.

MANY WATCHING CARRIER SHARES

Many market interests are watching the railroad group for a sign of improvement in the demand. The carriers are likely to come into greater favor in the next few weeks, particularly if the general list shows the improvement as many of the leaders of the bull party have been predicting. Public interest in the rails often has assumed important proportions when stocks are reflecting more persistent buying by traders.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE INVESTMENT FAVORITE

American Telephone & Telegraph still is an investment favorite. The stock has been taken by outsiders in odd-lots for several weeks, especially when moderate recessions have occurred. Effect of his accumulation should be felt more directly late next week after the rights are out of the way.

The company made a comparatively favorable showing in the first six months with $5.71 a share, against $6.15 a share in the corresponding period of 1929.

SPECULATIVE BUYING IN UNITED AIRCRAFT

Speculative buying has been coming into United Aircraft on a rather large scale in addition, a demand has come from outsiders. Since no new developments in the company's affairs are reported the purchasing probably is based on potentialities.

DU PONT OFFERING WELL TAKEN

E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. received virtually full subscription under its offer to its common stock holders of its right to subscribe to an additional issue of 357,071 shares of common stock, at $80 a share.

There were 11,334 subscriptions for a total of 355,862 shares, or 99.66 per cent of the number offered. Fully-paid subscriptions for 297,772 shares, or 83.38 per cent of the total, were from 9,040 subscribers, or 84.60 per cent of the number subscribing. Subscriptions for 58,090 shares were from 2,746 subscribers who elected to take advantage of the installment plan of payment.

At the subscription price of $80 a share the value of the 355,862 shares subscribed amounts to $28,468,960, of which 87.76 per cent or $24,983,560 has been received, leaving $3,485,400 yet to be paid by subscribers under the installment plan.

Promised Land To Be Made Out Of Deserted Area

—By B. C. Forbes—

Portland, Ore., July 26 [illegible] de are from Herbert Hoover [illegible]y [illegible]y [illegible]n of [illegible] [illegible]r that runs [illegible]n the sea [illegible]thout yield[illegible]g its fruit [illegible]n mineral [illegible]turns to the [illegible]ation in an [illegible]conomic loss [illegible]which in addi[illegible]n economic [illegible]plications, [illegible]an be compensated in mul[illegible]lions."

Mr. Hoover did truthfully have said millions instead of "millions" of dollars. Just as last—has been going. Now coming to fruition is Columbia basin reclamation project, designed to fructify rough irrigation, fully 1,800,000 acres of land of vast potential richness, but now largely abandoned because of want of water.

B. C. Forbes

While living in Africa I once saw a whole section of Johannesburg deliberately set aflame by the fire department and everything in it consumed. The resulting spectacle was truly magnificent.

Flying over a wide area of [illegible]reched land, and noting here and there an oasis, one recalled that terrible sight. What heartaches lie behind every abandoned farm with what feelings was the door closed for the last time? How was a new fight with the same land to be waged? Moses was here to lead these unhappy folks to a promised land.

But a veritable promised land is to be created out of this now deserted territory.

Some facts and figures were given in yesterday's column. Statements and others far from the pot the whole ambitious project may seem Utopian, impracticable, impossible. It is big. It is even breath-taking when viewed from 9000 feet in the air. Consider the figures given below. But we have the pronouncement of authority after authority that it is entirely feasible. And rarely have I seen anywhere, for any purpose, men enthusiasm and determination as motivates the responsible citizens in Spokane who are pushing forward the enterprise to fruition. There is no flash-in-the-pan outburst of exuberance. They have been at it for a decade and today are more resolute and earnest and confident than ever.

Gen. Herbert Deakyne, chief of engineers of the War Department in Washington, D. C., visited Spokane the other day, accompanied by a party to survey the past, the largest of many hugely placed federal efforts to prove the feasibility of the undertaking.

Most important of all however is the fact that President Hoover is enthusiastically behind the idea. He has extracts from statements made by him when he examined the territory carefully when secretary of commerce.

"The initiation and construction of the Columbia basin irrigation project is inevitable; it should be undertaken at the earliest possible date. My observations have convinced me that the Columbia river basin should be embraced in a national programme of major water improvement.

"It should not be delayed until we are overwhelmed with population in this country.

"In the upper stretches of this river there are two of the one-half million horse-power, and there is a possibility of adding 1,750,000 acres of land to intensive cultivation. By utilization of these great resources the State's industrial development will be greatly promoted and its population increased one half. Water today is our greatest undeveloped resource.

"Our streams and rivers offer us a possible total of 55,000,000 horse-power, and of this less than 12,000,000 has been developed.

"Our Government has done effective work with water, but we have wasted vast sums of public money under political pressure and we have now skimmed off the easy jobs. Today it is the major engineering jobs and opportunity of great national design which lie before us."

Some people imagine that just because the country is having a quiet spell it will never grow any more. The quintessence of childishness. Before that fat-raising undertaking can be completed. America's consumption of fruits and vegetables and dairy products will have increased voraciously and enormously.

Let us go forward, but slowly still.

NEW ENGLAND BUILDING AT FAIR PACE

By FRANK H. METCON

New England is building at a fair pace. F. W. Dodge reports of contracts awarded in this section for the week ended July 22 shows a total of $8,440,600. This considerably above the weekly average for the current year to date, which is $7,092,400

New England states led the country in permits in number cities for large public and semi public buildings in June. For new non-residential buildings cost of construction increased from $5,787,372 in May to $7,092,171 in June. Cost of contracts given for alterations and repairs increased from $12,948,358 in May to $13,634,102 in June.

Col. Benjamin A. Franklin, president of Associated Industries of Massachusetts, is always an interesting writer in regard to the business situation. He finds business is coming back

"There is a story of the foreman farmer, who, hauling a load of lumber to a new building, found his wagon mired and immovable. There came to his aid a passing traveler, who suggested that the wagon be unloaded and put on solid ground before reloading.

"This accomplished, the farmer [illegible]

was. But on returning with an empty wagon and a weary team, he noticed the [illegible] which, rusty, and the discouraged man sat on the seat exclaiming: 'Mein Gott! Work again, and nothing to unload'

"Is there any lesson in this story of New England manufacturers?

"Business progress has become temporarily mired. We need to be unloaded. Some old expenses may be thrown off. Antiquated equipment and machinery may be moved to a better situation. Old inventory, passing styles, the junk pile can be disposed of in a time when low prices are in demand.

"Perhaps if the old farmer instead of despairing, had looked to his harness, his hitch-up, had seen that his moving parts were all greased, he could have moved off for a new load.

"Many concerns take these breathing spells of ease growing demands to look over their organization, their hitch-up internally and externally, and to brush up their connections with new plans, new ideas, and new goods.

"For now, all signs to think, is the time to unload and to grease up.

"Business is coming back."

Our column yesterday carried the headline "Business Seemed to Be Improved. Almost the same phraseology is used by the Union Trust Co. of Cleveland in its latest study of conditions. The bank says:

"Business sentiment is changing. For the first time in the year advances prospects are for increasing industrial activities. In many lines feeling is spreading that the low level of recession has passed and that an upturn is at hand.

"The basis for this conviction apparently lies in the realization that on the whole in recent months consumption has exceeded production," says the bank in its magazine Trade Winds. "The feeling is growing that surplus stocks have been thoroughly worked off, that merchandise purchased by the public will have to be in a large extent in need of replacement and that before long a general demand for purchases will make itself felt to a larger extent.

"That the American public will have the capacity to buy as the season progresses is indicated by the fact that savings deposits in banks throughout the United States have on the whole shown a definite increase. Although there is still a great deal of unemployment among industrial workers, this is being offset in a larger extent by construction work, road building projects and other seasonal activities which are adding to payroll totals"

Canadian Steel Car Profits Up

Montreal, July 26—National Steel Car Corp. for year ended June 30, 1930, reports net operating profit of $1,147,807 after all charges, compared with $361,636 in 1929 and $5302 in 1928.

INSURANCE

First Half of Life Should Care for the Next.
$65,000,000 Paid on Lives in Past Year.
Some Interesting Facts About Policies.

—By Frank F. Loomis—

Life insurance [illegible] means providing out of the abundancy of the present for the uncertainty of the future. It is a mighty good plan to make the first half of the [illegible] of the second half.

Prospects will be found that life insurance costs too much! But they have never figured out the cost of being without life insurance. The highest price ever paid for life insurance [illegible] the families of men who die without availing themselves of the benefits thereof. Their dependents pay in shattered faith want of clothing food, etc. The longer a man goes without life insurance the more he needs it, in less chance he has of getting it and the more it costs him if he does get it. Many a man has delayed taking out life insurance because he had "irons in the fire." Put one into the fire, without thinking what a task it would be for his wife to take these irons out were he disabled or dead.

There is not a single reason that a family man can advance now that his widow will not some day, and perhaps soon consider very foolish, very [illegible] for not having taken out life insurance.

Reports published from life insurance companies indicate that approximately $65,000,000 has been paid out in the past year on life insurance policies, which have been in force for only one year or less. In numerous cases these deaths occurred before there was even time to deliver the policy premium having been paid for when the application was made.

The cost and benefits of the ordinary form of life insurance is practically the same in any old time legal reserve life insurance company and it is of course the cheapest form of life insurance there is. All other forms of so-called limited payment and endowment policies are based on the ordinary life rate. No one else can finance an annuity by purchasing a policy on the ordinary straight life rate which means that the annuity begins to be payable for life. It is insured desires the policy paid up at the end of a certain period, say 10, 15 or 20 years, he simply pays the company enough more than the cost of an ordinary life rate to accomplish this. The ordinary life rate to accomplish this. This is called an endowment policy

The reason that no mistake can be made in purchasing a policy on the ordinary life rate at the start [illegible] annuity which at any time during the life of the policy may be, need unloading. Some old expenses may be thrown off. Antiquated equipment and machinery may be moved to a better situation. Old inventory, passing styles, the junk pile can be disposed of in a time when low prices are in demand.

"Perhaps if the old farmer instead of despairing, had looked to his harness, his hitch-up, had seen that his moving parts were all greased, he could have moved off for a new load.

CURB MARKET ACTIVE, WITH GOOD RALLY

New York, July 26—Stocks rallied on the Curb today Trading was fairly active for the two-hour session, especially in the Utilities, which showed considerable strength, although the net advances in most cases were little more than normal.

American Gas & Electric was the featured stock. The floating supply is limited and b. ak bidding quickly pushed it up to 130, or 10 points above the Friday close.

There was a two-point reaction from the top. Electric Bond & Share, United Light A and Public Utility Holding rallied about a point, and American & Foreign Power Warrants showed a fair net gain of 2. American Commonwealths Power B was under pressure for some time, but closed even. A shares improved fractionally.

Some of the industrials were strong. Driver Harris rose 5 points on small transactions. American Cyanamid "B" moved up a point and Ford Motor Ltd., which is expected to be voted on favorably tion by important interests, gained about half a point. American Tobacco "B" was firm.

The oils continued dull, although displaying an upward trend on the [illegible]. Vacuum was a point higher and Cities Service and Standard of Indiana advanced fractionally

BOND MARKET VOLUME IS OFF

New York, July 26—Trading in listed bonds today was characterized by a half-day [illegible] session. Price movement was lethargic and the volume of sales diminished.

The prices of the highest grade issues were fairly well maintained, although some were inclined to ease. Carrier bonds showed a mixed trend, with Atchison 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Southern Pacific 4½s and Union Pacific 4s tending upward.

Great Northern 7s, St. Paul 5s of 1975 dipped. St Louis, San Francisco 4½s were active and firm.

Firmness of French issues which have been rising steadily most of the week and have been unusually active, together with the firmness of Mexican issues featured foreign bond dealings. Mexican 4s rose two points and the Mexican Railway 4½s advanced on the announcement that [illegible] bankers had reached an agreement with the Mexican government for settlement of the defaulted bonds aggregating $300,-[illegible]00 000.

Stock privilege issues were buoyant in sympathy with stocks. United States governments were dull and steady.

DOLLAR TRADE VOLUME IS UP

Business for the week ended July 19, as measured by the volume of check transactions, showed an increase of 18 per cent over the preceding week but was below the level of the period ended July 20, 1929

Wholesale prices, as a whole, showed but slight change from a week ago, but were 16 per cent lower than the corresponding period in 1929. Iron and steel prices, as measured by the composite index, showed no change during the week but recorded a decline of 10 per cent from the corresponding period a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts were greater than both the preceding week and the same period in 1929. The average prices for representative stocks registered marked gains over a week ago but were still lower than those of the same period in 1929. Bond prices, on the other hand, showed gains over both comparative periods. Interest rates for call money were lower, while those for time money were higher than the preceding week. Discount rates were lower than a year ago.

NEWS OF Trends of the Day MAJOR New York List MARKETS

New York, July 26—With U. S. Steel brought forward as a leader, today's short trading hours in Wall Street witnessed a brisk upturn that carried important shares out of the narrow rut in which they have traveled in recent sessions.

Popular trading shares were bid up 1 to 5 points, as professional operations for the advance were encouraged by the complete drying up of offerings in yesterday's decline, resulting in a rally before the close. Shorts who had put out experimental lines recently rushed to cover their commitments.

SOME PROFIT-TAKING

The market continued a highly professional affair, in the absence of decisive business news, with affairs generally in the grip of summer dullness. A moderately cheerful tone was maintained in the week-end business and trade reviews, however, which served to bolster bullish sentiment.

Such pool favorites as Case and Vanadium rose about 5 points. General motors, one of the most stable issues in which a strong speculative group has been working, rose more than a point and was bid up a point or so early in the session, but the move in this issue never got toward the finish.

U. S. Steel again came forward as a leader, as it was late yesterday, and sent up more than 2, partially in response to fairly pleasing forecasts of the second quarter earnings, to be disclosed next Tuesday.

TELEPHONE A FEATURE

American Telephone was a strong feature of the late trading, rising more than 3 points. Sponsors of the move in this issue assert that there has been a steady stream of investment accumulation in it of late, and that it should do better marketwise after the expiration of the rights, Aug. 4.

A group of active floor traders and a few professional operators appeared to provide the bulk of the day's trading, but it showed fair acceleration over the low levels of the early hours of yesterday. Many traders had left town for the week-end, so the active group had things pretty much to themselves.

The rally again carried the general level of prices well into the peak area reached late last week, when the technical reaction set in.

Common bullish sentiment continued in the main mildly bullish, although several looked for further irregularity, and one market letter writer expressed the opinion that it was useless to make any recommendations while the market remains primarily a trading affair for active traders.

OIL PACT FAILS

News from the oil industry was a little less favorable. The code of marketing practices appeared to appeared jeopardized by the withdrawal of Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp., and the curtailment program in the Darst Creek Field, Texas, appeared to have broken down completely, for the moment at least.

Earnings statements coming to hand continued to show numerous exceptions to the downward trend. In the assortment of June net operating income reports from railways, Missouri Pacific's was conspicuous, approximating the results of June of a year ago. Reports from the steel industry included announcement that Youngstown sheet would maintain operations at the present rate next week.

The rails were irregular. Chesapeake & Ohio and Chesapeake Corp. closed 1¾ higher, but Union Pacific was off nearly 3 and Atchison 1, having been down 3½.

General Electric, Public Service of N. J. and American Can closed up 1 to 2 points. Radio lost all of an early rise of a point. The close was firm.

Resistance Offered to Bears Is Cheering

Resistance offered to the bear attacks in Wall st. this week has been encouraging to forces working for the upside. Many believe the market to be oversold.

Yesterday one-third of the day's five hours of trading, as measured by volume, was done in the final hour. As prices were worked up, this fact was considered favorable. The fact that the stock market lately has been making very little response either to good news or bad.

MARKET'S ACTION LESS ENCOURAGING

Failure of the market to push through last week's high levels is resulting in liquidation on the part of others, as many of the bulls from some of those recently active on the "bull side." In these quarters, it is pointed out that the market displays a tired appearance and that a period of hesitancy would be welcome at the present time. Consequently bull leaders are disposed to take a position on the sidelines for the time being in order to permit the market to consolidate its recent gains in better fashion.

SHORT COVERING BIG HELP IN RECOVERY

Extent which short covering played in the recent recovery is clearly indicated by the brokers' loans increased only $23,000,000 during the past fortnight.

NATIONAL POWER PLANS EXPLAINED

Officials of National Power & Light have important plans under consideration which involve the increased distribution of power in the territory served by the company. It is understood that negotiations have practically been concluded between Pennsylvania Power & Light, a subsidiary of National Power, for the sale of electric current and gas in Philadelphia. Reading Coal & Iron Co.

National Power, it has been learned, also is negotiating with several other companies in Pennsylvania for the sale of its product. This, however, is the furthest that such negotiations are being considered. Incidentally it may be stated that the company has no power plans under consideration at present.

ACCUMULATION IN WESTERN UNION

Although Western Union normally is unattractive to the speculative element owing to its conservative management, important accumulation has been noticeable recently. This partially represents investment buying as well as some renewed speculative interest, attested by the yield of approximately 5 per cent. Furthermore, interests in close touch with the company indicate that operations during the second half of the year will prove more profitable than the first six months, due in part to a reduction in operating expenses.

AMERICAN CAN IS ACCORDED SUPPORT

American Can, at a meeting good scale-down support from banking interests, due to the knowledge of important developments to be announced shortly

INVESTMENT TRUST SELLING ITS RADIO

BIG GENERAL MOTORS OPERATION OVER FRIDAY?

Encouraged by the six-months' statement showing 50 per cent margin over dividend requirements, it is reported that a large-scale bull operation is planned in General Motors.

KENNECOTT CUT IN DIVIDEND DOUBTED

Strength in Kennecott Copper discouraged continued talk that its dividend would be further reduced. Demand for the stock was also induced by the more encouraging copper trade news.

GREAT WESTERN MAKING PROGRESS

Demand for Chicago Great Western preferred is evident on all setbacks, encouraged by appreciation of the fact that the road's net operating income in the first half of the year increased 61 per cent, and that for the first time in its history the June months' results covered interest charges.

UNION CARBIDE'S FUTURE STUDIED

Union Carbide has been fluctuating with the general list of high-grade stocks, but considerable long-term investment buying has taken place. Part of this demand, is based on realization that $53,000,000 new funds were realized last year through the sale of stock, the proceeds of which were applied to further development, results of which may be soon disclosed immediately.

S. O. OF JERSEY HOLDS FIRM

MANY WATCHING CAR SHARES

Many market interests are watching the railroad group for a sign of improvement in demand. The shares are likely to command greater favor in the next few months, particularly if the general list shows the improvement so many of the leaders of the bull party have been predicting. Public interest in the rails has not assumed important proportions when stocks are reflecting more persistent buying by traders.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE INVESTMENT FAVORITE

American Telephone & Telegraph still is an investment favorite. The stock has been bought by outsiders in odd-lots for several weeks, especially when moderate recessions have occurred. Effect of his accumulation should be felt more directly late next week after the rights are out of the way.

The company made a comparatively favorable showing for the first six months with $5.71 a share, against $6.15 a share in the corresponding period of 1929.

SPECULATIVE BUYING IN UNITED AIRCRAFT

Speculative buying has been coming in United Aircraft on a rather large scale. In addition, a demand has come from outsiders. The company made a profit in the company have been reported the purchasing probably is based on potentialities.

DU PONT OFFERING NEARLY ALL TAKEN

E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. received virtually full subscription under the offer to its common stock holders of the right to subscribe to an additional issue of 357,071 shares of common stock, at $80 a share.

There were 11,334 subscriptions for a total of 350,868 shares, or 98.66 per cent of the number offered. Fully-paid subscriptions for 297,772 shares, or 83.68 per cent of the total, were from 9688 subscribers, or 84.60 per cent of the number of subscribers. Subscriptions for 52,-090 shares were from 1746 subscribers who elected to take advantage of the installment plan of payments.

At the subscription price of $80 a share the value of the 350,862 shares subscribed amounts to $28,-069,960, of which 87.76 per cent or $24,983,560 has been received, leaving $3,486,400 yet to be paid by subscribers under the installment plan.

GRAIN EXPORTS DECREASE

The total of exports for the 12-month period was $246,400,000 as compared with $330,892,000 the previous year.

The principal losses were sustained in corn, which declined over $30,000,000; barley, which fell $31,000,000 and wheat, which dropped $6,000,000.

An improved condition was reported for the month of June. Exports were valued at $23,750,000 as compared with $15,491,000 in June a year ago.

Another report showed exports of agricultural machinery setting a new high record in the first half of the year, the total being $78,597,334 as compared with $77,068,581 during the same period last year.

'Phone Companies' Income Is Steady

New York, July 26—Income of telephone companies is holding steady. The operating income of 103 telephone companies in May aggregated $22,923,514, compared with $23,327,609 in the corresponding month last year. The aggregate for the first five months this year was $114,138,209, against $116,093,936.

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Melson, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

OMITS AMOUNT

L. C. Malden—I am grateful for past advice. Now I want your opinion on a purchase of Gold Dust.

Ans.—Gold Dust is a large manufacturer of cleansing and food products. Its record has been satisfactory. In 1929 net income was the equivalent of $4.06 a share, compared with dividends of $2.50 a share. In 1928 net profits of $3.71 a share compared with $6.02 in 1927 on a smaller capitalization. A large portion of the funded debt has been retired during the current year. At recent levels the yield is 6 per cent. What proportion of your accumulated surplus do you plan to spend? Also, how much will you retain for an emergency fund? What securities have you?

GIVE FACTS

S. R. Quincy—I am a reader of your paper and should like information on Paramount-Publix? Is the stock sound?

Paramount-Publix is one of the two recognized leaders in the motion picture industry. Dividends at various rates have been paid from 1926. Since March, 1930, the annual rate has been $4 a share, contrasted with $3 paid in 1929. Net for 1929 was $3.79 a share, compared with $4.06 in 1928 and $3.61 in 1927. In the first quarter of current year earnings were $1.79 a share compared with $1.16 for similar period of 1929. Unofficial agencies estimate net profits for first six months at $2.85 a share. This would compare with $2.28 for first half of 1929. At recent levels the yield is 6 per cent. What is the exact amount at your disposal?

HERE AND THERE AMONG THE CHURCHES

TREMONT TEMPLE

Tomorrow the Rev. Clarence S. Roddy, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Portland, Me., will be in the pulpit of the Tremont Temple Baptist Church. Mr. Roddy is one of the preachers who has been stirring the city of Portland with his ministry. He is a graduate of Gordon College of Theology and Missions and Colby College. During the past few years in which he has been pastor at Portland he has made a notable record. The church has been built up, large congregations have attended his ministry, and many have united with the church.

He supplied the pulpit of Tremont Temple on two occasions, while the church was without a pastor, during the last year. His messages proved very helpful and enriched the lives of many.

METHODIST BISHOP FLIES TO INDIA

Bishop John W. Robinson recently flew from London to Delhi, India. He reached his destination just 17 days after leaving New York city. The trip actually took 13 days to India from New York, as several days were spent in London.

BISHOP ANDERSON HOST TO BOSTON AREA

Bishop and Mrs. William F. Anderson have invited their Area to visit them at their summer home, Amblewoodon, Buzzards Bay, July 30 and 31, when there will be open house. There will be no formality, says the bishop, "just a good time for all who come. The more the merrier."

MT. VERNON CHURCH

The Rev. Burns Chalmers, associate minister of the Mt. Vernon Church, morning at the church garden service on "Conflicts" and in the evening on "Faith." Mr. Chalmers recently returned from Africa where he spent his honeymoon. He and his wife were delegates to the missionary conference in South Africa.

DR. WILLIAM T GILROY FROM BOURNEMOUTH

The editor of the Congregationalist, who with his family is abroad for the summer, has written for the current number of his magazine a description of the quaint residence of the Bournemouth conference. Among other things, he writes:

"In the general theme of the council addresses and discussions was "The Living Church," and the final discussion took place on Wednesday afternoon on the special theme, "The Protestant Witness." The main lesson to the discussions were by Rev. J. Morgan Gibbon and Dr. Ferdinand Q. Blanchard. Dr. Gibbon's address was a generous defense of Protestantism and arraignment of its critics. He expressed the fear that in many quarters Protestantism seemed resolved into mere humanitarianism touched with religio-sentimentality. He declared that to the larger part of the church today the Protestant is anathema, and he pointed out that while on our side the situation is changed, and one never hears reference to "the scarlet woman," the attitude of Romanists and High Anglicans is unchanged. He called upon Protestants to quit playing with reconciliation and with similar notions of one-sided reunion. "We are farther from Rome," he declared, "than Luther ever was, and farther from Canterbury than Baxter ever was."

CATHOLIC TRUTH GUILD

Five open air meetings were held by the Catholic Truth Guild during the past week; in Boston, Cambridge, Haverhill, Beverly, Framingham and Fitchburg. They were all well attended and much appreciated.

The band concert was postponed Sunday afternoon and the large open air theater was placed at the disposal of the Holy Name Society officers, assisted by the Catholic Daughters of Court. Both societies ranged the meeting. Over 3000 men and women were assembled from near and far who remained to listen to the presentation of Catholic Truth.

SERVICES ON THE ARBELLA TOMORROW

Rev. John M. Trout of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, Rev. Frederick H. Page of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, Mr. Waitstill Sharp of the American Unitarian Association and others will conduct a Puritan church service on the ship Arbella, now moored in the Charles River basin, tomorrow morning at 10:30. The leaders in this effort to reproduce a historic event will wear Puritan costumes. Dr. Page will deliver the sermon and Mr. Sharp will assist in the service by reading from Winthrop's diary. Mrs. Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ingraham, and others who have been asked to participate, in costume.

Admittance to the ship will be free and a full congregation is expected. The preacher has promised not to duplicate the old service exactly with a sermon two and a half hours long. There will be a barge alongside the ship to accommodate several hundred singers and members of the congregation Hundreds are expected to stand on shore, where they will be able to hear and see most of the service.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Truth" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 27.

The Golden Text is: "I will praise Thee, O Lord, among the people; and I will sing praises unto Thee among the nations. For Thy mercy is great above the heavens and Thy truth reacheth unto the clouds" (Psalms 108:3,4).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And he not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:2).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "If we look to the body for pleasure, we find pain: for Life, we find death; for Truth, we find error; for Spirit, we find its opposite, matter."

ARLINGTON ST. CHURCH

Rev. Charles R. Joy, administrative vice president of the American Unitarian Association, will be the preacher at the morning service at the Arlington Street Church tomorrow.

Mr. Joy was the minister of the Lord's Unitarian Church in Palm Beach before taking up his duties with the American Unitarian Association. Previous to his pastorate at Lowell he held charges in Dedham and Pittsfield, Mass., and Peoria, Ill. He is a graduate of Harvard University and holds an S. T. B. degree from the Harvard Divinity School. In his present position with the Unitarian Association he is actively interested in the establishment of new Unitarian churches. A subject of his sermon on Sunday morning will be "Midges and Seraphim" Mr Joy enjoys an enviable reputation as a preacher of power and depth.

PREACHERS ON COMMON

Open-air services on Boston Common continue under the auspices of the Congregational Federation of Churches each Sunday afternoon from 2:45 to 4:30. Large crowds gather and listen attentively to the three speakers, usually pastors of Greater Boston churches. Tomorrow the Rev. William J. Rutledge of the Baptist Church, East Boston, will act as chairman and lead the first service. Following him, the Rev. Charles H. Davis, Union Church, Wakefield, will take the reins. Ralph W. Rogers, assistant pastor of the Harvard Church of Brookline, will give short addresses.

PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By CARL MORRISON

Now that Mayor Curley has ordered the Boston Port Authority to make an official investigation into alleged mismanagement of the Army Base Terminal, the mayor's personal position may be revealed.

A few days ago the writer discussed the case with the mayor, who at that time had the matter under advisement. The mayor was disturbed by the continual reports, in the press and by word of mouth, about affairs at the base, going detrimental to the good of the port.

The mayor wants the port authority to make a careful but strictly impartial investigation. If conditions are found to be entirely as they should be, the Port Authority will be asked by Mayor Curley to announce that the current probe did an injustice to the men operating the lease.

If the allegations of mismanagement are sustained, then the mayor probably will ask the U. S. Shipping Board to cancel the present conditional lease which is so worded that it may be broken at once.

The whole case was discussed at the recent conference of shipping men. When one speaks of a reasonable doubt of being able to secure an investigation by the Shipping Board itself, the mayor had a suggestion.

"If the Shipping Board should persist in ignoring any official communication from the City of Boston," said the mayor, "an investigation by Congress is always possible."

When asked by the writer for a comment upon the investigation, the mayor replied:

"It has my hearty approval."

VAGABOND CRUISE

Bound for 15 days of "vagabond cruising" in the romantic seas near Havana and Caribbean, a party of New Englanders will leave Boston today on the United Fruiter San Gil.

In the party are: Charles H. Taft of Cambridge, Joseph A. Traver of East Boston; Michael J. McLaughlin and Annie A. McLaughlin of Beachmont; Arthur B. Jenkins of Hartford, Ct.; Elizabeth Levintal of Brookline; Elsie L. Anderson of West Roxbury; Anna A. Marshall of Wollaston, Elizabeth B. Marshall of Melrose; Catherine Crawford and Catherine O'Neil, both of Charlestown; Anna Sheppard and Mary Proctor of Malden; Frederick Lefer of Hartford, Ct., and Richard Lindemann of Providence, R. I.

MORE ABOUT THE PIER

Since we started a campaign to urge the state to remove all obstacle interests from Commonwealth Pier and restore it to use as a shipping interests for their exclusive use, we learned of a letter which John T. Scully wrote to Mayor Curley.

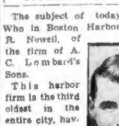
The director of the city's industrial bureau wrote in part:

"It really seems to be a joke to have a great pier, which was to become such an asset to the Port of Boston, to be used as a registry of motor vehicles and as an office building—as approved and now proposed—to permit the conversion of this pier for uses other than those for which it was originally intended, is nothing short of a crime."

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

The subject of today's "Who's Who in Boston Harbor" is Earle R. Newell, of the firm of A. C. Lombard's Sons.

This harbor firm is the third oldest in the entire city, having been founded some 105 years ago. Newell is the busy right hand man of Manager E. F. Connor, and his duties range from being manager of the inward freight department, to customs brokerage, claims and general passenger work.



Bachrach Photo
E. R. Newell

This young man is known as "Deek" and is sincerely liked in the long working field he has become to help his friends at all times. He has been with his firm for eight years and has become an expert on traffic and customs work.

As passenger man, Newell visits ships from about 15 foreign lines. This native of Newelton, Nova Scotia, has several hobbies. He answers by working in his new garden at Braintree with his young son. He follows baseball and hockey. At one time he was a star catcher for the famed Lynnfield Tigers.

NEW MODELS OF BUICK SHOWN FIRST TIME

Exciting the interest of the motoring world and arousing a widespread comment of approval, the new 1931 Buick line powered with straight-eight valve-in-head motors was presented to the public today.

Offered in four new series, the 1931 Buick Eight holds many surprises for showroom visitors.

In addition to its advanced straight-eight valve-in-head power plant, the new Buick has a synco-mesh transmission, new insulated body by Fisher, and many other improvements which, according to E. T. Strong, president of the Buick Motor Company, make the car the most outstanding car of the company's history.

Many refinements have been incorporated in the beautiful new Fisher body, and changes in construction have been employed to strengthen it structurally and eliminate any engine noise. The driver's compartment in all models has been completely insulated.

Among the engineering advancements on the new Buick Eight, in addition to the synco-mesh transmission, are an engine oil temperature regulator, dual carburetion and combined intake silencer and air cleaner, new crankcase ventilating system, improved steering gears, one-piece rear axle housing, new clutches and four-point rubber insulated engine mountings.

1925—Patrick Prendable—1930

He said goodby to none.
His heart had ceased to beat
And he was dead and gone.
His cheery smile and kindly ways
Were pleasant to recall.
He had a smile for everyone,
A kind word for all.
—His Children and Grandchildren.

The Calamity in Italy

Rarely Has Any People Been Visited So Severely

The Italian earthquake, followed by a tornado, levelling houses, palaces and churches already weakened by the earth trembling, emphasizes the littleness of man, in the face of angry Nature.

Italians in the stricken districts are entitled to the sympathy of the whole world. Rarely has any people been visited so severely.

Mr. McCay's cartoon emphasizes the power of Nature compared with the puny strength of man.

However, while physically weak, man possesses the mental strength that enables him in the long run to deal even with Nature herself.

Seismographic instruments foretell, locate and measure the strength of earthquakes.

Men know that the earthquakes are merely continued and gradual settling of the earth, that has been going on for millions of years.

Men no longer believe that any angry God is shaking the earth to kill them.

They do not believe, except in remote parts of China, that the earth dragon, disturbed in his sleep, has caused the disaster.

Fortunately, Italy will overcome the depression, and has the men to deal with the situation.

And the King of Italy and Pope Pius XI have sent representatives to the stricken regions to reassure and comfort the suffering and frightened inhabitants.

A Newspaper's Function

What Readers of the Boston Evening American Know

A newspaper can make hum-drum reports of the news of the day, be a Pollyanna, gloss over the evils and turn its back to the corruption in public life, attempt no constructive campaigns for the public good and acquire a smug reputation for itself.

Or it can portray the fair and the pernicious conditions as it sees them, encouraging the former, attacking the latter without fear or favor, and suggesting means of ending the evils.

It is that sort of a newspaper which the readers of the Boston Evening American know it to be.

The attack upon the stock frauds and fake transactions which have mulcted the people of Massachusetts of fifty millions of dollars annually has already uprooted the wicked situation, has secured the promise of reform and has brought happiness to some homes where only dejection prevailed.

You read in the news columns of the woman of moderate circumstances who was prevailed upon to invest $900 in securities which have not paid the glowing dividends she was assured and how the promoter has now guaranteed to reimburse her entire investment since the news of it was first published in this newspaper.

You read of another woman who several years ago put her money into stock which has never redeemed the pledges of the salesmen who operated under State sanction, how she, too, brought her sad story to this newspaper with the result that the brokerage house has arranged that she may be compensated without loss. Hundreds of other cases are under investigations. Several indictments may be looked for.

If a newspaper were not doing these acts which rout evil and bring happiness to others it would be not worth its existence.

Why Not Boast a Bit?

We Should Be Proud of Our Industries

In the first six months of this year 103 new industries established themselves in the city of Boston. They are taking up some of the slack of unemployment and for that reason if for no other they are to be wished well on their new careers.

The hope of New England for the future rests largely upon infant enterprises. They bring daring, virility and ambition to our economic life. And despite the lamentations of our modern Jeremiahs who harp so industriously about the "decadence" of New England when they could be putting their tongues to better use, New England has diversified her industry to a larger extent in the past ten years than any other section of the country.

An Illinois manufacturer said to us recently, "I have come on to buy the radio tubes for my factory from a little town in Massachusetts which few of your people hardly know by name. And as I travel through the State I am impressed by the large number of independent manufactories which are building equipment for the auto, the radio and the newer industries with which we are familiar. Without singing or boasting you have diversified to the new needs. Why don't you boast a bit?"

WHY NOT?

Women Careful Drivers

Have Less Percentage of Accidents in Bay State Than Men

She may pull you apart at the bargain counter, brush you aside in the hotel dining-room or run you down in the mad scramble for the subway train, but once she sits down in the driver's seat she becomes the model of caution.

Such is the inference which may be drawn from an analysis of accidents made for this newspaper by the State Registry of Motor Vehicles.

We have close to a million licensed operators in this State, about eighteen per cent of them women. They are involved in less than six per cent of the accidents.

True, they negotiate less mileage than the male. Nor do they assume the extraordinary hazards, such as the truckman and the bus driver.

But the record stands out gratifyingly when we take note that woman is relatively new to motor transportation and that she was not fortified with the early athletic training which quickens the eye, measures distances at a flash and develops the instantaneous judgment so vital to emergencies of this character. Possibly it is her fine recognition of these handicaps which give rise to her caution.

At any rate when we think of berating her for driving slowly at the head of a long line of traffic, we can ponder this accident record and thus curb our self-sufficiency.

THE REAL DICTATOR

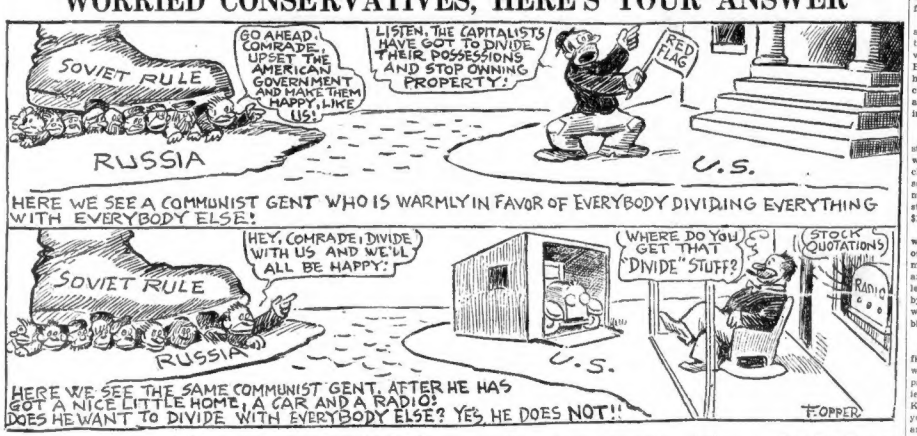
WORRIED CONSERVATIVES, HERE'S YOUR ANSWER



SOVIET RULE
GO AHEAD, COMRADE. UPSET THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT AND MAKE THEM HAPPY, LIKE US!
LISTEN, THE CAPITALISTS HAVE GOT TO DIVIDE THEIR POSSESSIONS AND STOP OWNING PROPERTY!
RED FLAG
RUSSIA
U.S.
HERE WE SEE A COMMUNIST GENT WHO IS WARMLY IN FAVOR OF EVERYBODY DIVIDING EVERYTHING WITH EVERYBODY ELSE!
HEY, COMRADE! DIVIDE WITH US AND WE'LL ALL BE HAPPY!
SOVIET RULE
RUSSIA
STOCK QUOTATIONS
RADIA
HERE WE SEE THE SAME COMMUNIST GENT, AFTER HE HAS GOT A NICE LITTLE HOME, A CAR AND A RADIO! DOES HE WANT TO DIVIDE WITH EVERYBODY ELSE? YES, HE DOES NOT!!
F. OPPER

The Millionaire or Billionaire who dreams of Bolshevik Russia, wakes up in a cold sweat and cries himself to sleep again, should study this picture.

Here, thanks to Mr. Opper, he will find comfort for his fears and an answer to his question: "How shall we meet and defeat Communism?"

All you need do is to keep workers employed, and the white collar men prosperous, with a car in the garage and gas in the car—THAT'S ALL.

No one hates Communism, Sovietism or Gory Red Russian Rule more than our artist, F. B. Opper. He is very, VERY rich; banks have built special vaults for him. He wets his bonds and squeezes them under hydraulic pressure to avoid buying a new safe.

But Opper knows there is no "Red Menace." The real menace isn't Red or Russian. It is golden, and it's U. S. A. The danger is in home foolishness. That radio in the lower right-hand corner emitting stock quotations typifies it. Big men should do something to improve those quotations.

H. G. Wells Writes

THE ENVIRONMENT may be said to pick over the germplasm of a species and weed out the genes to which it is antagonistic.

H. G. Wells

The process is always going on: there is no perfectly adapted species. Living things are continually adapting themselves more and more closely to the conditions under which they live. Now it is clear that in every generation the dominant genes will be scrutinized and either struck out or allowed to pass.

But the recessives may slip by. They may lurk in the race concealed by dominants and only present themselves for inspection once every three or four generations. In a word, they will be less intensively picked over than the dominants.

So that the dominants, on the whole, will be a better, more tried bunch than the recessives; the recessives, on the whole, will be the skeleton in the nuclear cupboard of the race. This, in a nutshell, is the reason why inbreeding, by bringing a scum of recessives to the surface, will in most cases lower the average standard of the stock.

And now let us note a case in which these principles were used deliberately for the improvement of a stock. East and Jones, working in America with maize, secured intense inbreeding by making the plants fertilize themselves for twelve generations.

Out came the recessives, and the plants separated into a number of true-breeding lines. There were strains with round or flat, colored or colorless cobs, with long or short ears, with more or less seeds on the ear, with large or small grains.

And the skeleton in the race-cupboard came out also: there were stunted strains and infertile strains, yellowish and albino strains, strains particularly susceptible to fungus diseases, strains unable to stand weight because of their malformed roots, strains with distorted ears. Thus the genes were sifted out and isolated.

After this had been done the most desirable strains were picked out and recrossed with one another, and thus a breed was obtained with all the fine characters of the original stock, but purged of the concealed recessives which made them throw up the sporadic abnormalities that defaced almost any field of maize.

Thus inbreeding may be used to purify a stock of the harmful cargo of recessives that it is smuggling. It is a long and expensive process, but it can be justified by the good quality and uniformity of the final product.

It has already been found to pay commercially with maize and sugar-beet, an advantage both to farmer and seedsman. We can be sure that in the near future the method will be applied to many other plants.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Just a Matter of Perspective

I LAY in the grass. It was not very tall grass, but, lying there with my face pressed to the ground, it seemed as high as the forest and as filled with mystery and menace.

Elsie Robinson

Here were long, winding tunnels and secret dens and yawning pits. The pits were, perhaps, an inch deep and the winding tunnels were but alits of shade between the tangled stems of weeds. But I was so close to them that they seemed as huge and terrible as any jungle. Among those tunnels monsters rambled and coiled—great, hairy spotted beasts—fanged serpents—winged carriers of death. Tiny ants and spiders and inch worms they were, in reality, but magnified to horrible importance by my nearness.

For long, sleepy moments I stared at these horrors as another bug might have stared. I had forgotten my normal, man-size world. I had forgotten the power and beauty of freedom which were my right as a man. I could see and feel only the dark and dreadful little world that lay beneath the stems — in which life squirmed, trapped in darkness.

Later, toward evening, I climbed a mountain. Not an easy climb. A narrow, steep trail, tangled in chaparral. But presently I came out into the clear. Far below me the land stretched out and out — tumbled hills—deep ravines—small clearings set like golden tiles in the dark bronze of the forest. And over it all twilight flowed in a quiet, green tide.

Many things lay under that tide. Farms lay under it, with the going and coming of men and their hopes and fears. The forest lay under it, quickening now with the stealthy night life of the beasts. And, somewhere, my little patch of grass lay under it—with its mimic dangers that had seemed so real and near from my bug-eye view.

All this lay below, but, from the mountain top, my view was so wide that none of it clutched me. I knew it was all there I knew there was ugliness there as well as beauty—pain as well as joy but they no longer filled my senses with their terrible importance. They had gone back to their natural places in the scheme of things. They were all of a piece with the rest of that resting, stirring twilight hour of life.

Then presently, the twilight deepened into amber—the deep ravines flowed with wine until all the land lay drenched in purple. And the sky which had been a brittle, white film opened.

And my mind opened—as the sky had opened. While I lay in the grass with my face pressed close to the earth and darkness, I had seemed a part of that earth, bound by its dumb and helpless terror. But now, that I sat with the earth below me and my head in the stars, I felt that I, too, was an inhabitant of space—moving along a wide and endless trail.

And it came to me that life was like that. Just a matter of perspective. If one lay too close to the ground—too close to self—any trifle was a tragedy. But if one chooses a mountain—no matter how hard to climb—one rose above pain and took one's place in the stars.

McIntyre Abroad

By O. O. McINTYRE

LONDON, JULY 26—For excellent and worthy reasons, everybody in London has become a "cheese parer." In America the term is "tight-wad." It is, of course, born of economic necessity. The British exchequer has been scraped to its bottom. Nearly every stock in the United Kingdom has "passed" dividends.

No person is immune from the saving apres—not even the royal occupants of Buckingham Palace, His Majesty and his very popular Queen. The Times this morning tells of the royal pair cutting down the domestic costs of the palace two thousand pounds—or $10,000—a week.

We drove past Buckingham this morning and after seeing so much depressing poverty there was a slight mockery in the impressive pomp of the Victoria monument and the lofty masonry of the palace itself. Such royal trappings, of course, are why much of England has listened to the perfidious tinkle of Soviet gold—hence strikes and further economic depression.

Last year, the year before that and the year before that and, yes, the year before that, dinner parties were just one long gabble about British and American stocks over here. This year the silence on financial topics is almost painful. People are doing little eating. And no talking at all.

• • •

A British friend of mine of long standing is somewhat typical of what is going on here. He occupied chambers in aristocratic St. James square, wrote when the spirit moved and lived handsomely on a stock bearing income of more than $14,000 a year.

He is now living in a shabby walk up flat in Bloomsbury without a man servant, can find no market at all for his usually salable articles and his dividend income is less than $600 a year. Multiply this by millions and you get a fair idea whither the Britannic winds are blowing.

• • •

I have always been a hound for finding out the income of people who interested me. On every newspaper I used to pal with the cashier. So: Parliament allows the King and Queen 437,000 pounds a year as salary, but before they have anything to do with the spending thereof Parliament itself deducts 360,000 pounds for "household expenses, salaries and special charges." The actual amount paid to the King and Queen yearly is $110,000—which isn't so much after all. Nor is it so little.

• • •

London remains the home of the flamboyant penny-dreadful weeklies. A hundred or more flourish here. Lord Northcliffe built up his famous newspaper properties from profits of his below-stairs weekly called "Answers." It still flourishes. Across the top of one of the weeklies today in screaming red type was: "This copy insures you for 1000 pounds against fatal railway accident." You learn by careful perusal, however, of the terms that you must be holding a copy of the periodical in your hand at the time of the disaster. The trick is that in most catastrophies everybody drops whatever they are holding.

• • •

The "Agony Column" of the sedate and scholarly Times continues as one of the most curiously interesting documents in modern journalism. From its columns today I salvaged this one:

"Mollie—Leave off the henna and the war paint and I'll come home. I thought I was marrying a demure Scottish lass instead of a red-headed spit-fire. Otherwise I'm going back to Indiana.—Stanley." We hope the candle lights still gleam along the Wabash.

• • •

Just, and you can skip this with no loss, as the American wooden Indian has vanished from in front of the tobacco shops, so has the wooden Highlander disappeared from the tobacconist's place here.

• • •

"May there be just enough clouds in each of your lives to form a beautiful sunset." That somehow expresses my feelings about England. She has had her clouds and is entitled, or so it seems to me, to a "beautiful sunset."

The weather forecast in front of Whitehall reads: "Channel choppy!" and that means all of us bound for Calais will do a sitting down Charlestun all the way. Whoops, my dears! And easy on the bridgework!
